PRESIDENT'S ARGUMENT NOT SATISFYING TO THE OPPONENTS OF LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20.—Senator Pittman of Nevada today introduced a resolution carrying out President Wilson's idea of interpretation of the peace treaty. Pittman is a leading Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and a strong advocate of the treaty and league. He stated that his action was the result of a desire to hasten action on the treaty and to put in concrete form the issues involved.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The outstanding result of the conference yesterday between President Wilson and the Foreign Relations committee on the peace treaty, is that opposition in the senate to the treaty in its present form is undiminished and unyielding.

According to statements by members of the committee not a single vote has changed as a result of the President's exposition of the treaty provisions; on the contrary opponents of the league asserted that the President's explanation of many of the disputed points was unconvincing and that some of the statements made by him will only tend to solidify the opposition.

It was authoritatively stated that when the committee began the actual work of passing on amendments offered to the treaty it will adopt the large number of the amendments prepared by Senator Pittman, which will take the United States out of the treaty arrangement and leave the nations of Europe alone to enforce the engagements against Germany.

The Republican members of the committee, among whom are some of the most uncompromising opponents of the league of nations in the senate, one and all declared that the President's explanation had failed to satisfy their objections to the covenant and that ratification of the treaty without reservation has less chance now than it had some time ago. There is a general belief that the President will find it necessary to accept some of the reservations in place of the mild interpretation which he had suggested.

One thing that stands out in bold relief as a result of the conference is that the committee is not going to be hurried into action on the treaty. Today it will go on with its sessions just as though it had never heard from the President. More witnesses will be heard by the committee on reasons for the Shantung decision and it is expected that additional light will be cast on the betrayal of China by the American peace delegation.

Professor E. T. Williams and Captain Morsback are the witnesses who will be heard. Both were connected in one capacity or another with the American peace delegations as experts.

The committee is determined to get at the bottom of the Shantung affair. In today's conference the President took direct issue with Secretary Lansing's testimony in the matter of Japan's pledge to quit the peace conference unless her demands for Shantung were granted. Secretary Lansing told the committee that Japan would have come in anyway, even if her demands were rejected; at the President flatly stated that Japan would have remained out of the league unless she got Shantung.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Urging that the Senate expedite the ratification of the peace treaty, President Wilson opened his conference with members of the Senate Foreign relations committee at the White House by making a long statement, in which he said:

That the preservation of our National life to all conditions absolutely depends upon getting the treaty out of the way.

That until it is out of the way, the mines, factories and business of the country, both domestic and foreign, will be at tremendous disadvantage.

That Great Britain and other nations that have ratified the treaty will get the jump on the United States

NEW AUTO LIGHT LAW EXPLAINED BY THE STATE POLICE

There appears to be a great deal of uncertainty and misinformation floating about concerning the new law "regulating the use of vehicles on the public highways; requiring lights on certain vehicles; and providing penalties for the violation thereof." Having had a number of requests concerning same The Progress took the matter up for the information of our readers and the public generally and publish herewith the provisions of the act relating to lights. We secured a copy of the act through the courtesy of Sergeant O'Donnell, of the local State constabulary, who also informed us it is the duty of the State constables to assist the municipal authorities of the State in enforcing the law.

That part of the law applicable to lights, with the penalties attached follows:—

AN ACT

Regulating the use of vehicles on the public highways; requiring lights on certain vehicles; and providing penalties for the violation thereof.

Section 1. Be it enacted, &c., That on and after the first day of July, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, from one hour after sunset until one hour before sunrise, or whenever it is impossible to distinguish substantial objects at a distance of two hundred feet, there shall be displayed upon every vehicle excepting agricultural machinery and such as are propelled by hand or are loaded with hay or straw in bulk, while standing or in motion upon any public highway in the State of Pennsylvania, at least one white light, which shall be clearly visible for a distance of at least two hundred (200) feet from both the front and rear of such vehicle.

Section 4. The term "public highway," as used in this act, shall include all roads, streets, avenues, alleys, and public places and all public bridges and the approaches thereto.

Section 5. Constables and police officers of the cities, boroughs, incorporated towns, townships, and counties, in Pennsylvania, and members of the State Police Force, may arrest, upon view and without warrant any person violating any of the provisions of this act.

Section 6. Any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be subject to a fine of not less than two ($2.00) dollars nor more than five ($5.00) dollars for each offense, to be collected by summary conviction before any burgess, alderman, magistrate, or justice of the peace, which fine shall be paid into the treasury of the city, borough, incorporated town, or township, wherein the offense has occurred. In the case of nonpayment of such fine, such person shall undergo an imprisonment in the county prison for a period not exceeding five (5) days.

Section 7. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed; but nothing in this act shall affect or limit special requirements for the display of lights or the regulation and restrictions placed upon

WANTS PAID FOR HIS INCINERATED FORD FLIVER

The possibilities of a Henry Ford are almost limitless but there are some things you can't do with one of the dadblamed things. Stanley Kava, who lives in the Houtzdale region, is now aware of at least one of these things.

On June 8th last Stanley and his Ford were rattling along their way up near Coalport when they ran across or alongside of one Barney Mesgher, who runs a coal mine for Jerome Thomas. At this mine is a gasoline pump used to pump water out of the workings. As Stanley drove in sight the pump stopped for lack of gasoline and Barney hailed the driver of the passing flivver and asked for a loan of gas. Being a good Samaritan Stanley fell for Barney's blarney and backed up to the pump to give up the poor old Ford's lifeblood.

The transference was started alright, but as sometimes happens the operation was a success but it was derailed hard on the patient. One of the assistants struck a match and at once a great light dawned upon everybody connected with the affair. The passing gas caught fire and so did the Ford. Result—Stanley was sans gas and also sans Ford. In addition thereto he was sans speech until he got his second wind.

He demanded of the coal operator the sum of $500, as he blamed Barney's actions on his employer and there you are. Thomas refused to settle and Stanley employed Attorney John B. McGrath to invoke the aid of the Clearfield county courts in collecting same.

The suit to compel Thomas to pay was filed in the Prothonotary's office yesterday. Stanley wants $350 for the incinerated Ford and $150 for his wounded feelings, etc.

Fans are carried by men and women of every rank in China. It is a compliment to invite a friend or distinguished guest to write some sentiment on the host's fan as a memento of any special occasion.

Approved—The 12th day of June, A. D. 1919.

This law went into effect on July 1st but on account of lack of general information concerning the requirements of the Act the constabulary has not been enforcing same strictly up to this time.

No particular style or make or light is required by the law, and any light which will comply with the terms of same is usable.

Contrary to reports no arrests have been made up to this time.

BULLETIN. WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20.—The United States Senate passed the repeal bill of daylight saving today by a vote of 57 to 19 and as the House has already passed the repealer over the veto of the President the country will go back to its peace-time, sun-time way of living the first Monday in October this year.

HUNT FOR BANDITS THAT HOPELESS CLOUDBURST OBLITERATES TRAIL

EL PASO, TEXAS, Aug. 20.—Four companies of the Eighth U. S. Cavalry, reinforced by four army airplanes from Fort Bliss resumed their hunt at dawn today for the bandits who held Lieutenants Peterson and Davis for ransom after a night spent in a farm camp in the barren wastes of the Ojinda country. The American force headed by Captain Matlock and led by the two released aviators as guides, took up the almost hopeless task after the trail had been obliterated by a cloud burst last night. The only contact with the Mexicans was reported by one of the airplane pilots who returned with the wings of his plane riddled with bullets after having exchanged shots at a low altitude, using his machine gun and killing, he believes, one Mexican.

Before leaving to cross the border Captain Matlock said, "We are going to get back that ransom money." Matlock is a regular army officer of eighteen years experience. He is a Kentuckian and familiar with mountain trails. The country in which the cavalymen are searching for the bandits is of the wildest in Northern Mexico. The troops carry only meagre rations on pack mules.

RAILWAY EXECUTIVES STATE PLAN WANTED FOR RAILWAY OPERATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20.—Continuation of present railroad rates and governmental guarantee of standard return was advocated before the House Interstate Commerce Committee as the only way of preventing disaster to the transportation system of the nation by Thomas Dewitt Cuyler, Chairman of the American Association of Railway Executives. Other recommendations were: the creation of a federal constitutional board having general oversight of railroad problems with a view to looking after the interests of the public. Maintenance of rates at a level which will permit of equitable wage schedules and the efficient upkeep of all equipment. A fair return on the value of the property used in public service and permit of extensions of service to meet the increasing needs.

GERMANS AND POLISH CLASH WHICH BRINGS MARTIAL LAW FOR SILICIA

BERLIN, Aug. 20.—Martial law has been declared in Upper Silicia as a result of clashes between the German and Polish forces. The German government minimizes the seriousness of the situation but admits that nineteen Germans have been killed. Chancellor Baur has told the German National Assembly at Weimar that the Polish government or people as a whole are not interested in the affair as the clash was purely local in character.

CHICAGO U. S. ATTORNEY FINDS MANY MERCHANTS TO BE PLAYING UNFAIR

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 20.—Announcing that a secret watch has been kept on 2100 Chicago retail grocers, Chas. S. Cline, U. S. District Attorney, today declared that he had compiled an "unfair list" which was headed by one grocer who had charged as high as nineteen cents for sugar and $4.86 for potatoes. The evidence will be turned over to the September Grand Jury and arrests will follow.

According to the Superior Court decision on the sale of near beer, every storekeeper, restaurant man and all pool room operators in the country who have been selling near beer, and that will include seventy-five per cent. of all the merchants of the county, are violators of the Brooks High License Law. While many of these people were simply waiting to take advantage of a loop hole in the law which would permit a trafficking in alcoholic content beverages we venture that the larger part of these people were ignorant of the consequences involved in the handling of an alcoholic beverage. Now that the Superior Court ruling is known there is no longer any doubt of the risk being taken by those who are engaged in the business.

ANOTHER EDITOR AND WHAT HE SAW

The guy who pulls down his salary as religious editor of The Progress has not been seen since the crap shooting episode, or at least he will not admit his identity so today we will have to shove our humane editor to the front. Our humane editor has a heart as tender as can be when it comes to children and he hopes that the subject of this article will read this column. The subject is a woman, to be exact—a young mother—accompanied by a little chap, or chapine, if that is correct for the slang of feminine gender, who, because the child walked out of the post office while the mother was addressing a letter, caught the little one by the hand, yanked it at least three feet in the air and carried it into the office to be roughly dropped on the floor where it lay shrieking with the pain of drawn and strained tender ligaments. Possibly this is not a fair subject for editorial comment but it got on our nerves and it had to come off, so now we feel better.

The almost royal honors paid to Beth Cavell at her funeral hours in Westminster Abbey typify the tribute paid by the nations to the part which women have taken in the world war—in their work, their aid and their sacrifices. Their work has been one of mercy and ministrations, but in many cases they have done it at the front under fire and at the risk of their lives, certainly of their comfort and health. When the history of the war comes to be written, the unprecedented part taken in it by women will be among its strong redeeming parts.

The Cincinnati Enquirer wants to cross the hen with the oyster because the oyster produces 400,000 eggs annually. We think the oyster might improve the hen, not so much because of the greater egg output, but in the possible silencing of the cockle. But if the hen should double her 400,000 eggs annually—well, good-night.

Why We Welcome Small Accounts

Many people believe that a bank does not want small accounts. In such accounts, however, the profits are mutual. The bank that encourages small accounts often sees them grow into large ones. The possession of a bank account inspires the depositor to saving habits and teaches him to be business-like. We are glad to serve the small depositor, believing his connection with the bank will benefit both him and ourselves.

A Good Fence

[National Crop Improvement Service.]
In some states a farmer has no reason for keeping his property fenced. In other states it is necessary to keep the stock fenced to protect the man who has no fences. The advantage of good fencing is so apparent that it needs no argument. It is necessary to pasture each field every four or five years and therefore

Corner Post Anchors

A corner post, being subject to a tremendous pull from two directions, is supplied with three anchors. It is set in the hole 4 to 6 feet deep, as in the illustration. The anchor is a steel rod, 1/2 inch in diameter, and is driven into the ground. The post is then driven into the hole and the anchor is secured by a nut and washer. The post is then driven into the hole and the anchor is secured by a nut and washer. The post is then driven into the hole and the anchor is secured by a nut and washer.

Baltimore is making elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the national convention of the War Mothers of America, which is to meet in that city in October.

making it much easier to feed, water, milk, ship, brand, etc. A good fence adds far more than its actual cost to the value of the farm.

A steel fence allows bug and weed dormitories to be burned out during the winter, destroying in this way millions of pests which could not otherwise be controlled.

If well galvanized and if the wires are of proper size and weight, the life of a fence is many years. If wooden corner posts are used, the illustration will show the best way to set them. However, the life of the best wooden post is seldom more than ten years while a galvanized steel post set in concrete and braced both ways with steel corner braces also anchored in concrete will last indefinitely. Just how long would be impossible to state because galvanized posts were not made before twenty years ago and they are all still giving good service.

The hollow steel line post when driven will spread at the bottom in such a way that it will anchor firmly without digging any post holes. Steel fences erected on all-steel posts are absolute lightning insurance because the current is discharged at every post, lightning always taking the easiest way to the ground. Even should the fence be struck, the live stock will not be severely shocked even when huddled into a corner.

A well-built woven wire fence on steel posts is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY OCCASION

An exceptionally enjoyable birthday party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Norris on South Second street today. It was in the nature of a double, we might say triple celebration. Mr. Norris celebrated his birthday on Tuesday and as today was the natal day of his twin daughters they decided to have a sort of quiet family reunion. Accordingly the daughters, Mrs. Anna Sahn, of Harrisburg, and Mrs. Alice Heinn, of Sunbury, arrived home last evening prepared to join with "Daddy" in taking proper note of the double or triple occasion. Mrs. Norris had everything in apple-pie shape for the happy occasion and it was indeed a most enjoyable family gathering.

LACE FROCK IN FAVOR IN PARIS

Material Is Considered One of Most Important for Afternoon Wear.

DARK SILK DRESSES PASSE

Gowns Considered Sufficiently Elaborate for Daytime Functions, if Embroidered or Otherwise Embellished, Are Passing Out.

Deauville, Aix-les-Bains and Monte Carlo are principal points of interest on the fashion program. Paris, which is to say all of fashionable Paris, has betaken itself to the smart resorts in France, so it is necessary to follow closely, asserts a prominent New York fashion writer, if one is to keep in touch with the latest developments in dress.

Always on the alert, Paris traveled to the races, but many of the best people were absent and the midweek fairs failed the dressmakers at the last moment, so that there were fewer new frocks than had been expected. Happily most of the troubles are over and the best houses have promised interesting and important changes. However, we are left to guess what the changes are to be, though a few of the models give some important clues and the assurance that whatever the changes may be one may be certain that they will be interesting.

The elegance of the pre-war toilettes is repeatedly mentioned and there is every indication that eventually the more elaborate manner of dressing will return. Lace, which has long since been discarded, is considered one of the most important materials for afternoon wear.

Many and conflicting were the comments on its use at the races, but in spite of adverse opinion it was noted that as the days passed by and the makers had an opportunity of showing new models the lace dresses increased in numbers.

An all-lace frock was contemptuously referred to as a lace curtain, but nevertheless the dress was repeated later by other women.

The widely diverging views in regard to the use of lace are to be expected, for there is no more difficult material to handle, and if used the frock is sure to be either a decided success or a miserable failure.

This creation is a combination of rich all-over cream lace and gold and blue-flowered chiffon. Hat is of black, glazed Milan, with great yellow organdie rose.

Paris is surely correct when following its usual rule of never doing things by half-way measures. It selects the widest laces possible and drapes them over something dark to give the pattern the best advantage. Other models illustrate the use of black and white Chantilly, used in the same dress with a most refreshing effect.

New Models Favoring Lace.

Callot, Chéruit and Pierre Bulloz are all making use of quantities of lace in the summer models, which they always show in midseason for the benefit of their resident Paris clientele. French women have always been partial to lace for afternoon wear and know how to wear it to the best advantage. Where the American woman is prone to place with it a hat that

OBITUARY

W. FREDERICK SHAW

W. Frederick Shaw passed to his eternal rest Tuesday morning, Aug. 12th, 1919 at 7:15 p. m.

Mr. Shaw had been in failing health for about one year and had been confined to his bed for about six weeks. Although warned of his serious condition his friends still hoped that he would rally and be about again.

He had demonstrated a strong constitution and high vitality which was marvelous to those who knew his age and the condition of his heart. Death was caused by a complication of diseases and the best care and medical aid could not combat the conditions existing to one of his age.

W. Frederick Shaw was born November 1st, 1841 at Goshen and was nearing his 78th milestone. He was the son of Robert and Sophia Schnarrs Shaw and most of his life was spent in the community in which he was born.

He followed farming and lumbering until he located in Clearfield in 1901 and where he has since resided, on Weaver street.

W. Frederick Shaw was married March 12th, 1863 to Sarah Jane Trump who survives to share the great loss with the following children: Mrs. Rush Bumgarner, Woodland, Pa.; W. Elmer Shaw, Mrs. Harry Spence, Ira C. Shaw; Reese E. Shaw all of Clearfield and Miss Effie at home.

There also survives him twenty-three grand children and twenty-six great grand-children. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw had been married for 56 years and six years ago celebrated their golden wedding.

To those who knew W. Frederick Shaw best he was most loved, and his even temperament, his sincerity and honesty with those he came in contact with made it possible for him to live and die without a known enemy. He was a member of the Methodist church during the past 30 years and after moving to Clearfield transferred to the West Side M. E. church, with which he affiliated to the end, and he passed away in the faith by which he lived and which made him the kind and loving father and husband and the patient sufferer which he was. He passed into the great beyond with a smile on his countenance which seemed to radiate from a soul on its homeward flight to the God who breathed into it the breath of life.

What greater heritage could man leave his friends,
When life with its joy and sorrow ends,
Than the assurance that in life "He did his best"
And now claims God's promise of Eternal Rest.

MARY ELLEN SHAW

Mary Ellen Shaw, relict of the late Richard Gilmore Shaw, passed away suddenly at her home, corner of Fulton and West Front streets Monday morning, August 18, 1919, aged 81 years. The deceased was a former resident of Goshen township, having removed to Clearfield to reside with her sons when her late husband retired from farm work some ten or twelve years ago.

Mrs. Shaw was of the finest type of Christian womanhood, whose every thought was of her home and loved ones. She was an earnest consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church from early girlhood, closely following the teachings of the Master in her daily life and conduct. She was ever the tender, loving mother and her sudden taking away was a sad shock to her family.

She is survived by the following children: Mrs. McClellan Owens, of Woodland; Harry L., Epra T. and Cecil Shaw, all of Clearfield and Mrs. Edwin Cooper, of Erie, Pa.

The funeral occurred this afternoon, services being held at the West Goshen Methodist Episcopal church with interment in Goshen cemetery.

HAVE FUN WHILE GETTING TOYS FOR KIDDIES

For the past week some of the children of West Market street have been quietly practicing for a play which had the initial showing yesterday afternoon on the lawn at the Dowler home. Elizabeth Dowler and Bernice Anderson coached the children, the play being "Adventures in Toyland." Each child represented a different kind of doll. By the time for the evening performance the fame of the show had traveled so that grown-ups and children from all over town were there. By charging 10c admission they were able to clear over $17.00 which the children are going to use in fitting up the Children's Home with play apparatus. Good work. Somebody else do likewise.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Brasler at their residence on Susquehanna avenue, South Side, on Monday evening, a son.

Mrs. W. F. Patton is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Russell, arriving from New York City last evening.

The Mothers Meeting will be held in the basement parlor of the Presbyterian church Thursday evening, August 28th.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. will sell ice cream during the evening of Labor Day on Dr. Blair's lawn.

Large streamers have been stretched across the main thoroughfare of this town announcing "Labor Day celebration" and reception and dinner for the returned soldier boys.

Frank Athens, manager of the Sugar Bowl left for Ohio today, his objective point being Okron. It is stated by his intimate friends that he is looking up a new business location.

"All is not gold that glitters." Some half dozen Curwensville boys who were lured to Ohio towns by the big money that was to be made there have returned home and are now seemingly satisfied that old Curwensville is good enough town for them to live in.

All patriotic ladies who are members of Rebekah lodge are requested to be present at the regular meeting to be held in Odd Fellows hall Thursday evening, August 21st, for the purpose of outlining plans for the Labor Day anniversary. This meeting will be of vital importance to the welfare of the lodge, and every member should be present.

A colored lad aged about four years, a son of Samuel Bryan and whose parents reside in one of the houses at the brickyard was wading in the creek yesterday afternoon, when he accidentally stepped on a piece of glass and severed the tendon of the heel. Dr. Blair was summoned and considered the wound of such a character as to warrant sending the lad to Clearfield hospital for surgical treatment.

William Russell, who spent a week or so visiting his sister, Mrs. Ganoe at West Point, returned home yesterday evening, accompanied by his niece Constance Ganoe, who will spend some time with her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Russell.

The Alumni of the Curwensville High school are making extensive plans for their annual picnic at the Irwin park tomorrow afternoon and evening at which time the Ladies Aid of the Baptist church have arranged to sell ice cream and coffee.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Maurey attended the wedding of Mr. Maurey's niece, Miss Kathleen Maurey to Thomas Beers, of Harrisburg, which took place Tuesday morning at the home of the brides parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maurey of Grampian. Mr. and Mrs. Beers will make their future home at Harrisburg, Pa.

WORK AND SAVE IS REMEDY FOR HIGH PRICE EPIDEMIC

Federal Reserve Board Tells U. S. Senate How Thrift Will Bring Relief.

Washington, Aug. 20.—"To work and save" is the remedy for the increasing cost of living pointed out recently by the Federal Reserve Board.

In reply to an inquiry from the Senate Banking Committee asking if it was advisable to attempt contraction of currency by legislation in the hope of reducing prices, Governor Harding wrote Chairman McLean that the growth in the volume of circulating notes was the effect and not the cause of advancing wages and prices, and that the war period of finance would not be over until government obligations, now carried by the banks are absorbed through the actual savings of the people.

Strong censure of strikes and extravagance was implied in Mr. Harding's letter, which did not, however, undertake to blame any one section of the population, but referred to the nation as a whole, especially to the relation of economies practiced during the war and the purchase now of non-essential articles by persons enjoying large incomes for the first time.

"The Federal Reserve Board believes that any currency legislation at this time is unnecessary and undesirable," Mr. Harding wrote, "and would suggest that the remedy for the present situation is to work and to save, to work regularly and efficiently, in order to distribute the largest possible volume of commodities, and to exercise reasonable economies in order that money, goods and services may be devoted primarily to the liquidation of debt and to the satisfaction of the demand for necessities, rather than to indulge in extravagances or the gratification of a desire to luxuriate."

The government is doing everything to promote reasonable saving. Government Thrift and Savings Stamps and U. S. Treasury Savings Certificates permit of regular saving in amounts from 25 cents to $1000 invested in safe securities to fit every person's need.

Bank clerks are wondering if the end of the war means another set holiday, to be observed every year.

Now that all our women have learned to knit will the home folk have warmer feet than usual this winter?

The End of a Perfect Day

THE CLEARFIELD PROGRESS, CLEARFIELD, PA. WEDNESDAY EVENING AUGUST 20, 1919

CHAPTER I.

The Last Round.

An oily sea! Stillness—absolute stillness, save for the groan and creak of the yards and booms, as the dark rolled lifelessly on the long, shimmering swell. Not a breath of air; only a stifling heat that beat upon the decks until the pitch in the seams bubbled.

Only a waste of water that reflected the mercurial tropic glare of the sun and hurt the eyes cruelly.

Under an awning in the stern a man in cotton shirt and trousers, who was huddled in a chair by the cabin skylight, lifted his head and mumbled through cracked lips.

"Twenty grains of calomel, twenty-four quinine—magnesia, peppermint-water gone."

His hands fumbled with the drugs from the ship's medicine chest that strewed the skylight, and guessing at the quantities, carried portions to his mouth. He swallowed with difficulty, and relapsed into a huddled position.

After a little he raised his head once more, and began to count upon his fingers. One, two, three, four, five—was it five or eight days, or ten, or a month that the calm had lasted? He did not know. He had lost all track of time. But it worried him, and to his sick brain assumed very vital proportions. The ship's log would tell him.

He reached for it and began to scan the entries. It was strange that trying to read brought red flashes and pain to his eyes.

The words came only to him in snatches.

"October 10. Still becalmed. Intense heat. Native boatswain took sick this morning."

"October —. Buried boatswain last night. Four more of crew down. We've got yellow fever aboard. God help us if we don't get a breeze!"

His eyes went on down the page in a haphazard, irresponsible way, skipping entries here and there unconsciously.

"Still becalmed. God have mercy on us! Native crew all down. Chinaman named Won Su, after making a murderous attack in his delirium on Wallen, the first mate, jumped overboard."

Yes, he remembered that. He was Wallen—Stacey Wallen—the first mate of the bark Upolo. It had been a horrible sight.

The poor devil had rushed at him screaming and—he shuddered a little—he did not want to think of that. What was this entry here?

"The heat is horrible. Survivors too weak to bury the dead. Captain Mitchell died at 2:10 a. m."

That was the last entry. There wasn't any date on it. He couldn't remember whether it had been yesterday or the day before. Well, what did it matter; and, anyway, it was time to make rounds.

Rounds! What rounds were there to make? Everybody was dead. Johnson, the second mate, had died that morning, though he hadn't made the entry of Johnson's death in the log; what was the good? There wasn't any more use for a log. Everybody was dead except himself—the other two white men and the crew, who were all natives. And now he was down, too; he was only waiting for the fever to run its course.

Making Rounds Was Over Now.

That would take maybe a few hours more.

A voice within him seemed to keep whispering: "Rounds! You've got to make rounds, make rounds." For two days or nights, or whenever it was since Johnson had first taken sick, he had made rounds unceasingly with the medicines; that was why the medicines were on the skylight, so that he wouldn't have to go below.

But making rounds was over now; there was no one to make rounds for—there was only himself. "Rounds! Make rounds! It's time to make rounds!" the voice insisted.

He roused himself. Yes, that was so. Last time he had gone along the deck Ting Wah was still alive. The man would be dead now probably, and the medicines weren't any good, anyway; it was air, God's air, that was wanted. "Rounds! Make rounds!"

He staggered up from his chair, collected some drugs and, reeling to the ship's side where the rail would help support him, made his way painfully forward to where another awning was stretched over the fore-deck. He kept his eyes in front of him; there were shapes about the deck covered with anything that had first come to hand—shapes that should not have been there only at the last Johnson and he had been too weak to do anything but throw coverings over them. He didn't want to look at the shapes.

There was one form, only one, that was uncovered, and he knelt beside it. Ting Wah was still alive.

"Medicine," said Wallen hoarsely. The Chinaman pushed it away.

"No can take," he answered weakly. "Me finish."

Wallen steadied himself with an effort, and looked at the other closely.

It was near the end; but still, as under certain conditions it sometimes did, the disease had left the man's intelligence unimpaired.

"Look here, old chap," said Wallen cheerfully through his own cracked lips. "You never know. Buck up. Take the medicine." He stopped to lift the other's head gently, and nearly fell himself in doing it.

A sudden gleam of gratitude came into the Chinaman's eyes.

"You good man," he whispered. "You all same good man. But no can take—all same finish now." He pushed the medicine away again; and then, pinched at Wallen's sleeve, evidently trying to get the mate's head down closer to his lips.

The man was going fast. Wallen tried to force a kindly smile.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Listen!" said Ting Wah. "Mebbe you die too. Mebbe no. All same me tell—you good man—last night bling medicine all night you good man—me tell—"

His voice trailed off weakly.

"Yes?" prompted Wallen kindly.

The man tried to speak, tried again, but without avail.

Wallen's own head was reeling, premonitory of coming nausea.

"It's all right, Ting Wah, it's all right," he said soothingly. "Better not try to talk."

But now Ting Wah, with a desperate effort, raised himself to his elbow. "Yes, me talk!" he gasped out. "But must talk quick. Me here, Won Su here, four more all same Chinamen come on board and make crew on ship here for all same knife you."

There was contortion in the man's face, a pitiful struggle to fight back the weakness and exhaustion that was upon him. Wallen stared at him in a dazed way.

"Kill me, Ting Wah!" he cried out. "What for? You—you don't know what you're saying, do you? You don't mean that!" The Chinaman's elbow was slipping gradually away from beneath him, his eyes were closed. The medicine spilled from Wallen's hands onto the deck, and he caught at the other, propping him up.

"Ting Wah! Ting Wah!" he cried again, shaking the man to rouse him. "What do you mean? Ting Wah, don't you hear me! What did you mean to kill me for?"

There was no answer. The man was—no, not yet! Ting Wah's lips were moving. Wallen bent his head still closer to catch the words.

"Drink-House Sam—Singapore—him know."

That was all. It was over now. Wallen straightened up unsteadily, and lurched to the rail where he could cling on to something.

Six Chinamen had shipped as part of the crew so that they could kill him. Why? He laughed in a sick fashion. What did it matter? They were all dead, those six—and every one else—and in a few hours he would be dead too. He laughed again, a little hysterically. This Drink-House Sam of Singapore, whoever he was, ought to be satisfied with that!

He clawed his way back to the after-deck, and dropped into his chair again. His brain seemed to go numb for a time, to be indifferent to everything—and then suddenly to become strangely active. Six Chinamen had shipped as members of the crew so that they could kill him. It wasn't a pleasant thought, even if the whole six were dead now, and that he himself would be dead, too, before long.

Oh, yes, he believed it now, right enough—why shouldn't he? What about that murderous attack Won Su had made upon him, and that he had thought was delirium! But that wasn't all, he had reason beside that

To believe Tung Wah's story; reason enough, God knew! now that he came to think of the things that were crowding into his mind.

Out of the shimmering heat waves that rose along the deck and seemed to hover so weirdly over those covered shapes that ought not to have been there, another scene gradually took form, at first indistinctly, vaguely, then in sharp outline, startling, distinct.

It was a stone house, a gray stone house, all by itself, without neighbors, isolated, a silent place. Yes, he remembered it! It seemed to bring a chill upon him now—the cold, dreary, lifeless house had done its best to crush even a laugh out of his boyhood with its eternal, silent brooding mystery. That was why he had run away ten years ago, when he was fifteen.

All his earlier recollections were of that place.

His mother wasn't there, he had never seen his mother. There were just his father, and that tall, swarthy Eastern servant, who frightened his boy's heart—just those two and himself. He never saw anyone else.

No one ever came to the house. No one was ever admitted. Gunga, the servant, fetched the supplies from the nearby village. His own education was superintended by his father. But there had never been any intimacy between his father and himself.

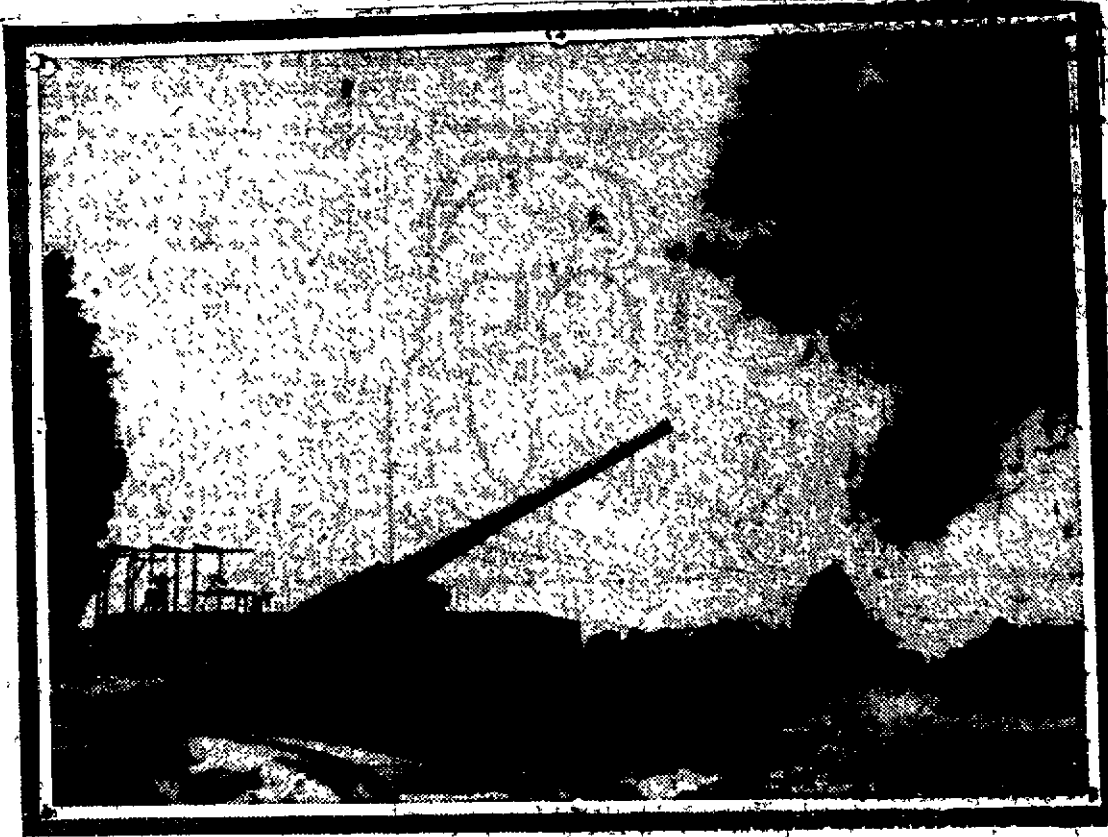

He had never questioned his father but once—after that he had never dared to do so. He remembered the deadly whiteness that had come over the morose, taciturn face, the grip of iron upon his shoulder, the hoarse passion in his father's voice.

"Never speak to me again of that," his father had said. "When you are older, when the time comes, you shall know."

Wallen rocked unsteadily in his chair. What a frightful stretch the ship possessed—or was it only his imagination? What was it he had been thinking of? Oh, yes, the six Chinamen. He had come to kill him, and the house where there were so many doors and locks, and where every night his father and Gunga turned the keys and the chains rattled on the doors as they fastened them.

He raised his hand and passed it across his eyes in a startled way. How vividly it came back to him, that night—as though it were just happening now, as though he were in the very act of living it again!

A crash in the dead of night through that silent house, and he had sat up, trembling, in bed. Then a cry, the report of a pistol shot, and the

MAKING IT UNSAFE TO TREAD ON UNCLE SAM'S TOES.—To sting for the first time the new American 14-inch naval gun, mounted on specially designed 10-wheel railroad carriage, at the Indian Head, Va., proving grounds. echoes of the shot rumbled and reverberated through the house, striking terror into his young heart. And he was crawling out of his bed, and out into the hall and down the stairs in his nightshirt.

And half-way down he stopped in horror.

Below, in the hallway, stood the giant form of his father holding a candle, and on the floor lay stretched a huddled form, and Gunga, with a revolver, was bending over the Thing that did not move. Then came his father's voice, in a strange, queer note of tense eagerness.

"Look again, Gunga. Has he one finger on the left hand?"

And Gunga had shaken his head as he had answered.

"I have looked, sahib, and the hand is whole."

Spelthound he had stood there on the stairs, a lad of fourteen, and Gunga had lifted the Thing in his arms and gone away with it; and the great figure of his father, dressed in pajamas, had stood motionless for a long time, then turning had faced the stairs and caught sight of him—and suddenly had sent a wild, unnatural laugh ringing through the house.

"You there, eh, Stacey?" he had laughed out, as though unmanned,

"Well, I'll tell you something now. Never go to the East. Remember that—never go to the East."

And then he had pulled himself together, and his face had set sternly as he had pointed up the stairs. "Go back to your bed!" he had commanded sharply. "Go back to your bed instantly!"

"Yes," said Wallen aloud to himself. "That's what he said: 'Never go to the East—never go to the East.'"

But he had come to the East and six Chinamen had shipped aboard the Upolo to kill him. His father had been quite right in telling him not to go to the East. How was it that he had come there? He had run away from that gray house after that night, and he had never heard of his father since.

That was in California.

He had gone to Frisco, and gone to sea. He had been at sea ever since in all kinds of ships, and he had done pretty well. He had his master's certificate already.

But that did not account for his being here in the Java sea, and for those six Chinamen. He had been fourth officer of the Tokomaru when they had touched at Shanghai a few weeks ago. She was a fine ship, the Tokomaru, the biggest passenger liner in the fleet—only a fourth officer's pay was very small.

He had met Captain Mitchell of the Upolo ashore there, and Captain Mitchell had persuaded him to ship as first mate on the Upolo for double the pay he had been getting. The Upolo, of course, traded through the Java and Banda seas—that was what his father had meant by the East—touching at Shanghai as a port of call in a liner wasn't the same thing.

How that sun burned through the awning! It seemed to stab and drill into his skull with little shafts of exquisite pain. He could get away from it, of course, by going below into the cabin, by putting the deck between him and that torturing ball of fire, but in the cabin one couldn't breathe.

One couldn't live in the cabin—Captain Mitchell was there and Captain Mitchell was dead.

Had Captain Mitchell anything to do with those six Chinamen? Or anything to do with Drink-House Sam in Singapore? And where was it those six Chinamen had joined—at Shanghai like himself?

If he could remember that he would know whether Captain Mitchell had had a hand in the cursed game. Hadn't Johnson said something about new hands? But then native crews were everlastingly shifting about. It was a long way from Singapore to Shanghai. Who was this Drink-House Sam? What was it Ting Wah had said? "Drink-House Sam—him know."

"Him know, him know, him know"—the words began to run through his mind in a singsong, crazy fashion—and then a passionate, merciless anger seized upon him, and the splendid six-foot bulk of the man heaved up from the chair, and, clenched fist raised, he swayed upon his feet.

They had got him! Not the way they had thought to get him—but they had got him. And he could not fight—there was no one to fight—he could only die like a trapped rat, while this Drink-House Sam laughed a thousand miles away!

"Him know, him know, him know"—the words coursed like fire through his brain. He shouted aloud, and the nails of his fingers in his clenched fist bit into the palm of his hand. He could not choke the life, as his own went out, from this devil in Singapore that he had never seen—he could only die.

The uplifted arm, as though too heavy for him, fell to his side, a ghastly whiteness spread over his face, he reeled, clutched at the skylight for support, and slipped prone upon the deck. It was the nausea upon him again.

The virulence of the attack passed after a while, but for a long time he lay where he had fallen, weak and exhausted.

He was semi-delirious when he stood up again, and hung limply against the skylight. Medicine—yes, that was what it meant—that stuff there spilt all about. He put some into his mouth. His eyes fastened on the ship's log open in front of him. What kind of a book was that? What was it doing there? Had he been reading? He couldn't read when he was sick.

It was very strange. No; he remembered now, he had been writing in it. Whenever any of the crew died he wrote it down in the book.

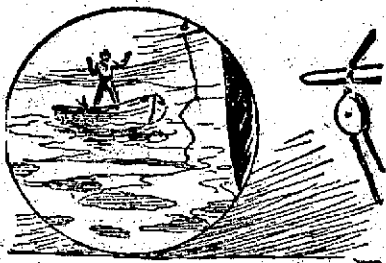

And now the crew was all dead, and he would be dead, too, very soon; therefore he should also write his own name down while he could still write. He remembered it all perfectly now—that was what the book was for.

He lurched forward and picked up the fountain pen from where it had rolled into a broken package of powdered quinine. He lurched, again heavily as he leaned over the book. A nervous twitch of his hand gouged the pen-point into the page and left a blot. He shook his head in a gravely puzzled way.

It was queer that the pen wouldn't write as it had written before; it seemed to travel all over the page, and—he paused, his hand going to his eyes again—it was strange that he couldn't think of his own name!

He was first mate, he knew that; but—yes, his name came back to him now. He wrote on laboriously. He finished the entry, dropped the pen, and stared at what he had written, nodding his head.

"Died today, S. Wallen, first mate." He read the words aloud, and nodded his head again. It was true, quite true. When that damnable sun that was tormenting him through the awning was gone, that would be the end of today and he would be dead.

His eyes strayed forward along the deck—and widened with a dawning fear. What were those shapes there? He began to fumble to himself, and suddenly shrieked out aloud. It was a horror ship.

He shrieked aloud, rushed to the rail, and in the delirium of his mind crouched low to hide himself from this dead throng that raved like demons for medicine, ran screaming forward to where the ship's boat bumped monotonously in its rise and fall against the vessel's hull.

He hurried himself over the side, cast the boat loose, and snatching at the oars began to pull like a madman away from the ship. Two hundred yards off he stood up and shook both fists and yelled tauntingly—they could not reach him now. But why not? Suppose they should swim after him! He flung himself to the seat again and piled the oars furiously.

And then slowly the strokes lessened, and presently an oar fell from his grasp, and after that, with a moan, he pitched forward into the bottom of the boat—and all was blackness.

CHAPTER II.

On the Road to Pobi. "Mon," expostulated the Scotch trader, "but you're fair daff! You're but out of the jaws of death, and I'd no say you're all the way out at that. Bide a bit, there'll be another in a month—or in two, anyhow."

Wallen, standing in the center of the little galvanized-iron-roofed storehouse, his eyes on the native who had entered a moment before, shook his head.

"I've got to get away, MacKnight," he said earnestly. "There's no use talking about it. What kind of a ship does he say it is?"

MacKnight flung out a question in the native tongue.

"He says it is a big smoke-boat," translated the trader, "which will be by way of saying it's some meussy steam coaster that's so small it's no able to accommodate its own cock-roaches, d'ye mind! Mon, pay no attention to it. What's another month or so—and you'll be strong then, and—ah, mon, but I hate to have ye go!"

Wallen, gaunt and thin from his illness, shook his head decisively again, though the other's words had brought a quick responsive smile to his lips.

News for the Housewife at Preserving Time

Here is a recipe for preserving syrup that will give you finer jams, jellies and preserves—and save you about one-half your trouble.

Instead of all sugar use only one-half sugar and one-half Karo (Red Label).

You will find this means clear, firm jelly; rich preserves with heavy syrup; and delicious jams, mellow and "fruity". Karo is a fine, clear syrup, with a natural affinity for the juices of the fruit.

It blends the sugar with the fruit juice—brings out all the "fruity" flavor.

Furthermore, it prevents even the richest jam or jelly from "candyng".

It does away with all the uncertainty of preserving, and just about cuts the work in half.

For cooking, Baking and Candy Making Karo (Red Label) is used in millions of homes. In all cooking and baking recipes use Karo instead of sugar. It is sweet, of delicate flavor, and brings out the natural flavor of the food.

FREE A copy of the Corn Products Cook Book is all ready to send to you as soon as we receive your name and address. It contains any number of helps to the woman who expects to make preserves, jams or jellies.

BOOZELESS FRONTIER DAY BIG SUCCESS

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Aug. 18—

United Press—There was an eastern school teacher at the Cheyenne Frontier Days celebration who thought a bulldog figured in the steer bulldogging event.

But she was not so far from the truth, as were old timers who thought that "Chian" couldn't stage the great annual show without "booze." The celebration just held was the first under prohibition. And it was the most successful of the frontier days. Crowds ranging up to 20,000 daily assured that next year and for many years without liquor the cowboys will hold forth in their annual festival.

Tent colonies of auto tourists, spread out on the plains near Cheyenne, attested to the widespread popularity of broncho busting, roping, steer bulldogging and horse racing. Cowboys from Chicago to Walla Walla and Cody to Fort Worth were entered in the contests.

A Parisian, with a sense of humor, bequeathed 300 francs to each relative who abstained from attending his funeral. Only one poor relative insisted on following the deceased to the grave; and her loyalty was richly rewarded, for by a codicil to his will, the deceased left the residue of his large fortune to those relatives who were prepared to sacrifice the 300 francs.

It is to be hoped our boys are not thinking of bringing home a throne or two as a souvenir of the great war.

American soldiers when they left for Germany were not only all dressed up; they knew where they were going.

There is a great deal of salvage in war, but it doesn't even approach the value it had before it became salvage.

We do not know what can be done about the winter itch unless a way can be found to get it before the peace conference.

What the boys would like especially is to have the government get them home in time for the opening game next spring.

One must hope that their old jobs have been kept for the army of demobilized men who are about to be demobilized.

The registrant who sent back a blank questionnaire missed an opportunity to learn a great deal about himself and his affairs.

Soon we should hear the real truth about how that Belgian paper was published so regularly during all the years of German occupation.

It will be some little time before old conditions are sufficiently approximated to permit reference to a million dollars as a large sum of money.

Malele and Mame are wondering how many of those reconstructed homes in France and Flanders will have the help of a Yankee son-in-law.

The German propaganda is still with us, and it behooves people to examine into harrowing or disturbing reports before putting too much credence in them.

Having avoided trouble with their neighbors during more than four years of war, it is a poor time for the Swiss to begin fighting among themselves.

Food prices, Washington says, went up 10 per cent during the last year. Does Washington imagine that information comes under the head of news to the people?

lage here had picked him up at sea and brought him, as it were, to this big-hearted man's door. He owed his life to MacKnight.

"It's no use, MacKnight," he answered. "I've got to go."

"It'll be that black devil in Singapore!" ejaculated the trader, screwing up his wizened face and pulling viciously at his beard. "You'll no play the fool, Wallen. It's not fit you are to go. Listen to me, mon: it's a matter of twenty miles across the island, as ye know well, and no conveyance, ye mind. And it's no regular trader that's called, for none is due—she'll have put in for water or the like, and will be sailing again at daybreak."

"I can make it by daybreak, MacKnight," Wallen stated quietly.

For a moment MacKnight stared at Wallen, then his hands dropped from Wallen's shoulders.

"Well, go, and be damned to you, then!" he said gruffly, deep down in his throat to hide his emotion—and, turning, stepped abruptly outside.

There were not many preparations to make—very few.

Wallen's worldly possessions were his only through the generosity of the trader. But MacKnight did not stop at that now, for, five minutes later, as Wallen started for the night's tramp across the island, a Malay guide, well loaded with supplies, started with him, while MacKnight cursed with earnest profanity as they wrung each other's hand.

At the edge of the clearing Wallen looked back. On the great bearded figure that leaned against the door frame of the solitary trading station Wallen's eyes lingered.

The man waved his hand and shouted:

"Mon, ye'll no forget MacKnight o' Arru! Ye'll no forget MacKnight, mon!"

And then suddenly a mist dimmed Wallen's eyes. He tried to shout back—and could only wave his own hand in return. And then the trees hid the trader from view.

Forget MacKnight! The man who had nursed him back to life as a mother would nurse her child! Forget that solitary human outpost of civilization—a man with an iron fist, a barbed-wire tongue and a heart as tender as a woman's! No; he would not forget MacKnight!

He forced a smile to his lips. One made strange friendships in these far parts of the world, and made them under strange circumstances. The chances were a thousand to one that he and MacKnight would never meet again—but, for all that, it was a friendship that would last.

Twenty miles across the island before daybreak!

Wallen fell to wondering what sort of a ship and, more pertinent still, what sort of a skipper was on the ship that had put him off. He had refused MacKnight's offer of an advance of money, and he hadn't a penny—but he was satisfied that he would not be refused passage in any case. He could work his way.

A white man who knew his business was worth his weight in gold on a ship any time in these parts. It was true he wasn't any too fit yet; but he was fit enough for that, fit enough—a dull flush came into his face, and his eyes hardened—fit enough to get to Singapore somehow!

He had not forgotten that ghastly afternoon in the reek of the post ship, nor the Chinaman who had died in his arms whispering of Drink-House Sam of Singapore! Forget! He had thought of nothing else all these weeks, raved of it in his delirium, so MacKnight had told him.

There was one thing dominant in his life now—Drink-House Sam of Singapore, the man who had tried so mysteriously to take his life, to stab at him treacherously, without warning, out of the dark.

Singapore! Singapore! It was never out of his mind now. To get there, to force the truth, the motive, the reason, the story behind all this from the human spider that lurked in his web, and then—his fists clenched fiercely—and then settle with the man himself!

And that was why he must get to Pobi before daybreak, before this steamer sailed.

He walked on steadily, without sense of fatigue, his mind abnormally active. And then, with a little shock of surprise, as the Malay made signs to halt and set about kindling a fire, he noticed for the first time that it had grown almost dark.

And also, to his surprise, he noticed that where he had experienced no fatigue before, he was, as he sat down, suddenly grateful for the rest.

He scowled a little over his dipper of tea that the Malay had prepared—and rubbed his leg muscles vigorously. They twitched nervously as he put his weight upon his legs. That was bad! His lips set grimly. Well, bad or not, they'd have to take him across the island before daybreak!

They started on again.

An hour went by, and he was obliged to rest—and after another start and many more after that, to rest again and again with alarming frequency. And, worse still, his progress when he was walking kept growing less and less.

It was black in the tropical forest. He could see nothing, and he stumbled constantly in the vines and creepers that everywhere overgrew the path. He was at last forced to admit that he was not making much more than a mile an hour, and twenty miles at a mile an hour was—he groaned.

The Velvet tin is twice as big as shown here

IF ever men are "Tom" and "Bill" to each other, it's when good pipes are a-going. If ever good pipes go their best, 'tis when Velvet's in the bowl.

For Velvet is a mighty friendly smoke. Kentucky Burley is the leaf that Nature made for pipes. Wholesome and hearty, honest as the day. And Velvet is that same good Burley leaf, brought to mellow middle age.

For eight long seasons Velvet "meditates" in wooden hogsheads, throwing off the rawness of "young" tobacco—truly "ageing in the wood." Out Velvet comes—cool, calm and generous—the tobacco Nature made good, kept good and made better.

Velvet's sweetness is the sweetness of good tobacco, not "put on" like "frosting" on a cake. Its mildness comes from natural ageing, not from having the life baked out. Its fragrance is true tobacco fragrance, not a perfume. And Velvet makes an A Number One cigarette. Roll one.

As good old Velvet Joe says:

"Fill yo' heart with friendly thoughts,
Yo' mouth with friendly smoke—
An' let the old world wag."

BASEBALL RULERS SEEK TO BAN BIG "BAN" JOHNSON

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—If Ban Johnson doesn't make some side or back-steps of definite character within a very short time it is quite likely that he will experience a brand new sensation next winter—that of being relentlessly hunted.

Being hunted in itself spells nothing new for the American league president, but being hunted with the definite purpose of being found and decapitated will be altogether new.

Johnson, in the past, has come some great things for baseball. Largely through his predominating influence, in the early days of the American league, base ball was nurtured and thrived until it became the nation's greatest amusement.

In the last few years, however, Johnson has done a few things that speak unsavory things for him. The latest of these was his crippling of the New York ankles through suspending Carl Mays immediately after that star pitcher had been purchased from the Boston Red Sox.

Last winter there was some effort, misdirected as usual, to force Ban to recede from several points. Clarke Griffith, Harry Frazee and Charles A. Comiskey were said to be trying to force Ban to resign. The trouble blew over quite as quickly as it had started.

Now the New York club, strongest of the lot, is after Ban's scalp, and the bitter enmity borne toward Johnson by raze is on the scales to help Clarke Griffith, wielding the power of the Washington club and Charles A. Comiskey, with his powerful Chicago influence, are expected to jump onto the wagon. These things it can be readily seen, do not portend a peaceful winter for Johnson, inasmuch as it is believed that Detroit and St.

Louis can be swung over to the anti-Johnson side. Owner Navia of Detroit has a bit of grief toward the head of the American league, since on two occasions Hugh Jennings was suspended when victories meant so much to his Tigers.

Johnson was kept quiet for a time by warnings but he has broken out again, and if he really can be forced from the presidency of the league it probably will come to pass during the coming winter months.

When she wrote her famous novel "Comin' Thro' the Eye" forty-four years ago Miss Helen Mathers was only twenty-two. Today it is still one of the best sellers, although the fifty-third edition has been published. But Miss Mathers does not share in the property of the book. When she had written it she was offered a few hundred dollars down by the original publisher, or a share of the profits. She accepted the cash offer, and thus lost about $100,000 which she would have received in royalties.

Jap---U. S. Relations In Most Excellent Shape Declares Ishii

(By United Press.)

TOKYO. (By Mail.)—An entirely optimistic view in regard to the future relations of Japan and the United States was expressed by Viscount Ishii, Japanese Ambassador to the United States, who has just returned to Japan, in an interview the other day. The Viscount said that there is no collision of vital interest between the two countries on any problems, although it is inevitable that now and then propagandists will talk about a Japan-American war, and some people will believe that relations between the two nations are badly strained.

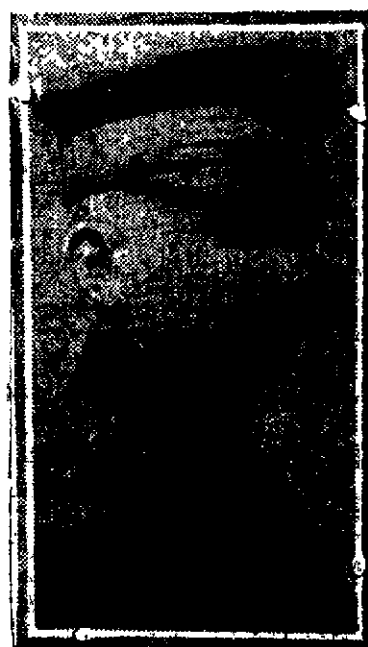

He attributes all misunderstandings between the two Powers to the intrigues of propagandists, some of whom are active in China, he said. America's vital interests are mainly in the European and Latin-American markets and not in the Orient market, the Viscount said. Therefore, America is contented with the strict observance by the powers of the open-door and equal-opportunity principle in China, and has never dreamed of an economic monopolization of the Chinese market nor will she dream of such a thing.

America's safety in the extreme Orient, continued the Viscount, lies in her developing China industrially and commercially hand in hand with Japan as well as with other Powers, but not in trying to monopolize Chinese national resources. Though the Oriental market, especially that in China, may be of vital interest to Japan, Ishii does not believe those interests are being endangered by the American participation in the industrial exploitation of China, because, however wealthy the American capitalists may be, they cannot be considered as aspiring to pour the greater part of their capital into enterprises in that country to such degree that no other country can compete with them.

Since the American Government, as well as the American people in general, are confident that Japan will never destroy the principles of the open door and equal opportunity in China thinking people there fell quite safe and satisfied with the present situation. For the same reason, Ishii approves of the American proposition of the consortium for China. He says it will be very advantageous, not only to China herself but also to Japan and America, for two reasons: First, it will do away with useless economic competition among the Powers interested in Chinese finances and economics, and, secondly, it will serve to put an end to the activities of propagandists.

Referring to the Chinese peace delegates' refusal to sign the Peace Treaty, he said this action was very disadvantageous and that would soon be brought home to China that it is advisable to sign.

MATEJ KOCAK,
 Sergeant, Company C, 5th Regiment, U. S. M. C.

Sergeant Kocak (deceased) won the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in action near Solissons, France, July 18, 1918. When the advance of his battalion was checked by a hidden machine gun nest, Sergeant Kocak went forward alone, unprotected by covering fire from his own men, and worked in between the German positions in the face of fire from enemy covering detachments. Locating the machine gun nest, he rushed it, and, with his bayonet drove off the crew. Shortly after this Sergeant Kocak organized 25 French colonial soldiers, who had become separated from their company and led them in attacking another machine gun nest, which was also put out of action.

Mrs. Mary Gleason, of Watertown, hopes to become the first woman sheriff in the State of New York. At the present time Mrs. Gleason's husband holds the office. His term will expire next year and under the law he is not eligible to re-election. His friends have therefore started a movement for the nomination and election of Mrs. Gleason so that the efficient administration inaugurated by her husband may be continued.

WAR GRENADES AS SAVINGS BANKS

Yanks' Explosive "Eggs" Made Safe For Distribution to Children.

The most unique and interesting of all souvenirs of the great war will soon be ready for distribution among the boys and girls of Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey.

These souvenirs are hand grenades originally intended to be used with deadly effect against the German armies. When the war ended the government had millions of them made up. There being no longer any need for them as war weapons, the War Savings Division of the Treasury Department secured a large supply. The grenades are now being altered into savings banks to hold dimes and pennies.

The alteration simply means removal of the explosives from the grenades and the cutting of openings for deposit and removal of dimes and pennies. No change is made in the appearance or in the springs and triggers by which the grenades are operated.

Hand grenades, or "bombs," were among the most ingenious and most deadly weapons used in the war. The grenade made for the United States Army was an improvement on all the best types of hand "bombs" invented by foreign army men.

When loaded for use the grenade was kept "at safety" by a small pin which locked the firing trigger. The thrower was required to hold the bomb in his throwing hand, pull out the pin with the other hand and then make a throw. As long as the grenade was held in the hand it was safe because the hand kept a strip of metal under pressure which prevented the firing spring from working.

The instant the bomb was thrown this strip of metal was forced off by the firing spring which also operated the trigger. This trigger struck a cap which set fire to a fuse timed to burn for 5 seconds. At the end of that time the spark reached a detonator which exploded and blew up the main charge of T. N. T., shattering the bomb into about 40 pieces. These pieces were the outside shell of the grenade, it being marked out into little squares which became flying bullets because the force of the explosion broke them off at the thin parts of the shell.

The explosion was almost sure death to everyone within ten yards of the spot where the bomb burst. The Yanks called the grenades "eggs." They were "bad eggs" to the Germans.

These wonderful weapons with firing pin and trigger still included but made safe and harmless are now being used to build up instead of to destroy. They are the queerest and most interesting savings banks ever made. To obtain one a boy or girl is required to buy a 1919 Government Savings Stamp, which costs $1.19 during August and $4.20 in September. The stamps and grenades are to be obtained at banks or at offices of the War Savings Division in every town. A Savings Stamp is to be bought when the boy or girl goes for the grenade. The boys and girls also sign a pledge to use all of the money saved in their grenade banks to buy more Government Thrift or Savings Stamps.

That is how the grenade will help to build up. The money put into Savings Stamps is loaned to the Government and will be used to pay off war debts and promote the Government's prosperity plans.

Savings Stamps costing $4.19 or $4.20 in August or September, 1919, will be bought back by the Government in January, 1924, for $5 each. Those who buy them not only save their money, but earn good interest on it. Thrift Stamps start a Savings Stamp bank account and cost only 25 cents each.

Further information about the way the grenades are to be distributed and how soon they will be ready may be obtained at banks and War Savings offices everywhere.

As a means of preventing small boys from "hanging on" automobiles an inventor has fitted up a contrivance which gives an electric shock

Meat Injurious To The Kidneys

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

The name of a ship counts a lot with a sailor. For a great many sailors won't sail on a ship whose name begins with "S" while the letter "C" is another initial which is disliked. And a female name is preferred to a male name.

BUILT RAILROADS IN WARTIME THEY CAN DO SAME NOW

(By United Press)

PARIS. (By Mail).—Bringing down Boche airplanes and dropping bombs on German railroads are excellent training for construction bosses. At least so says Mr. Henri Bouche, Paris contractor, who advocates the employment of France's air force in aiding the reconstruction projects in Northern France.

According to Mr. Bouche aviators can immensely facilitate the following three phases of the work.

- (1) Obtaining valuation of damages.
- (2) Planning the reconstruction work.
- (3) Supervising actual rebuilding.

Taking a census of the damages will be a work involving innumerable physical obstacles if undertaken only by inspectors on the ground. Bouche points out that aviators, unhampered by the impossibility of the roads and trench-lined fields, can easily reconnoiter the whole front, take pictures when necessary, and in a few hours accomplish what it would take months to do by any other means.

Attacking the reconstruction problem, says Bouche, will be not unlike attacking an opposing army. At first, the reconnaissance must be made, exact knowledge obtained, whether an immense waste tacked. Just as the for German batter seek out ruined bridges and shell rid

Thus by gathering records of the ruins can assist the evaluation upon which the repair to be based.

Then when the arm has been determined, be assigned the task reconstructions. Being both a mental and vis of the task, they cap plans for rebuilding area.

Finally, the actual the work can best be can the air. Just as the avi report the results of the they can in the future, progress of the work projects. In this the ordination can be the work carried out of extensive lines

When opals the mine they can be picked out of the soil.

MILK MONEY

Care of Milk

Great deal of money this season because nearly every condensing, milk plant, and it necessary "to turn back" a large has so deteriorated that it cannot be used milk, milk powder or cheese.

That every can of milk "turned back" is a waste of every possible means to insure it in good condition. The first essential. This should be much easier in summer it is easier to keep cows and stables arms are compelled to walk through a barnyard in coming to the barn to be over the legs and udder of the cow with a high bacterial content and such a result at once. The stables should be kept a farmer is so busy with the crops that the rush of work is over or until a rainy not only makes it extremely difficult to also attracts many flies which are an addition of clean milk.

Insists has been found in some places to be. The strainers and milk buckets should be disinfected each time they are used. In many milk is marketed are washed at the plant. In some plants it is thoroughly done and by steam. In other cases, however, the gain after they are returned to the farm. from the cheese factory in the same cans to the factory in. Too much attention is given if this practice is followed. The cans are scalded and aired before they are used cooled just as low as possible just as soon as possible. The exact method by which this is done is a problem for each individual. A constant supply of cold running water is a big asset to a milk. Many farmers set the cans of milk in a vat of water and find it very satisfactory. Farmers who do not have a large amount of water use an aerator to cool the milk rapidly. A combination of these two methods. Where one has a vat of water and a truck should be put into a vat of ice water. Milk taken to a "four corners" to wait for a truck should be sun. This can be accomplished by covering with a blanket.

It has been said: Produce clean milk. Cool it at a low temperature until it reaches the

UNITED STATES IS RICHEST NATION IN ALL THE WORLD

LONDON (By Mail)—While the brain might reel at the mass of figures unloaded at a meeting of the Royal Statistical society, some interesting details as to the world's wealth can be extracted from a paper written by Professor J. C. Stamp Comparing the pre-war wealth and incomes of England, Germany and the United States, Prof Stamp computes the respective totals at

	Wealth
England	$71,500,000,000
Germany	82,750,000,000
United States	210,000,000,000

	Income
England	11,250,000,000
Germany	10,750,000,000
United States	36,250,000,000

On a per capita basis, also, America comes out easily the richest country in the world. The capital per head of the population, according to Prof Stamp was, before the war.

	Capital	Income
England	$1,590	$250
Germany	1,220	150
United States	2,120	360

All these figures must be considerably inflated to obtain the current year's capital and income, but the increase would certainly be biggest in the case of the United States, which could boast at least treble its pre-war wealth.

The thrifty habits of the French nation were reflected, said Prof Stamp in a capital of $1,515 per head, while Italy and Austria had only $640 and $605 respectively. He computes Japan's capital at $12,000,000,000, or on a per capita basis, $220 capital and $30 income per head of population. The capital and income of Spain was probably as low as any in Europe, the income per head not exceeding $55.

New Zealand has a railway that runs in a perfectly straight line for one hundred and thirty-six miles.

In a certain section of Persia there is a race of pigmy camels five feet in height and snow white in color.

Lobsters are said to have a great dread of thunder, and when peals are very loud will swim to deeper water.

In normal times about one in every fifteen Frenchmen is connected in some way with the wine and liquor trade.

In northern China vegetarianism is almost the rule, the food principally consisting of turnips, potatoes, corn, rice and millet.

SUITS AND COATS

Return to Strictly Straight Line Is Predicted.

Variety of Styles and Contradictions Between Paris and New York Expected to Continue.

Differing from the general opinion abroad is an American authority who is emphatic on the subject of width in suits and coats and makes the statement that a return to the strictly straight line tailored coat is certain. As this comes from one of the houses which are not at all extreme and very well known it carries weight. It is possible, notes a leading fashion correspondent, that the next season will see the same variety of styles and absolute contradictions between Paris and New York that have prevailed for the last twelve months.

Paris, quite as much as China, is a place where they do things by opposites. Having discarded as much clothing from the knee downward as possible, in the warmest of weather they are wearing velvet berets and velvet hats. It is fortunate that there is a vogue for hats of black tulle and Chantilly or the smart Parisians would be doomed to wear nothing but velvet on the warmest of days unless she resorts to the glycerinated paper hat—a late innovation.

The white velvet is, of course, very much smarter than black, if one must wear velvet on a summer day. Lewis put forth some charming models in leghorn and milan, but they proved too commonplace for the Parisian, who refused to wear them.

One of Lewis' best liked models is of white velvet in a rolling brimmed sailor shape with a huge "pout" or marabou in white also. It had the merit of looking summery, at least in color, and does not look as out of place as did some of the velvet tam-o'-shanters, which sound in description a great deal like our own Greenwich village headgear.

PRaise FOR THE BLUE SERGE

Material May Be Made Up Into Coat and Skirt, or Into One-Piece Street Dress.

There is no material which so perfectly displays restraint as a very dark blue serge. The color and the texture in themselves suggest a world of tempting opportunities ignored. Thus there is implied an experience with, and knowledge of, infinite varieties of other hues, other clothes.

According to the need of the wearer, the blue serge may be made up into coat and skirt, or into a one-piece street dress. With an exacting eye for the narrow shoulder, the close-fitting tapering sleeve, and the utmost precision of finish and cut, coupled with a resolute determination not to concede an inch to the skirt hem, one may give free scope to other lines. Once these details are observed, the most fantastic sweeps of the tailor's shears may be allowed.

Blue serge is the most efficacious background for accessories of the toilette and for little finesses. Let it be a starting point for pearl gray or sand-colored spats, for matching mousquetaire suede gloves rolling loosely over the tight wrist, for a dark hat of concentrated lines and for a fur neckpiece of reduced proportions. Then, as a signature to the work of art, as well as an insinuation of what one might have done, let the veil etch a mad design in one bold, detached pattern upon the cheek. This is a dashing touch in a costume otherwise reserved.

Blue serge is unassailable, impeccable. It is clever, and it is wise.

THE HAT AND BAG TO MATCH

A novelty floppy summer hat, lined in rose with a band of that shade. The bag (to match) is sort, with a lining of rose, strings and Chinese beads.

Javelle Water.

This water is fine for removing stains. Take one pound of sal soda and 5 cents' worth of chloride of lime. Put them in an earthen bowl, pour two quarts of soft boiling water over them (rain water is best). Let it settle, then pour off the water and bottle it. It will remove fruit stains and even indelible ink. Soak till stain disappears; then quickly wash in warm water.

The skin of an elephant when tanned is very expensive, the tanning taking about six months.

A way to do the Family Washing in 15 Minutes

Wouldn't you esteem it a blessing if you could have the toil and muss of the family washing all over within ten or fifteen minutes?

A dream? Not at all—for it can be done. Here is the recipe.

First ten minutes—Gather up the family washing and make a list of it.

Next four minutes—Wrap securely into a bundle.

Last minute—Telephone our Laundry.

Total time expenditure—Fifteen minutes.

Time saved—Ten to fifteen hours.

When our driver calls, he also gathers up the untidiness and drudgery of washday—and leaves for you, leisure for more womanly activities.

Meanwhile your washing is at our laundry being cleansed with thoroughness and a consummate care that no laundress can excel. There is no boiling or rubbing to fray fabrics and wear out clothes. We achieve cleanliness by gentle sousing and rinsing in clear, soft water and pure white suds. Your clothes are daintily finished, too, and returned to you sweet and spotless.

Reduce your washday to fifteen minutes by sending your family washing to us. A telephone call will bring our driver.

DAYLIGHT SAVING LAW HAS BEEN REPEALED.

PRESIDENT'S ARGUMENT NOT SATISFYING TO THE OPPONENTS OF LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20.—Senator Pittman of Nevada today introduced a resolution carrying out President Wilson's idea of interpretation of the peace treaty. Pittman is a leading Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and a strong advocate of the treaty and league. He stated that his action was the result of a desire to hasten action on the treaty and to put in concrete form the issues involved.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The outstanding result of the conference yesterday between President Wilson and the Foreign Relations committee on the peace treaty, is that opposition in the senate to the treaty in its present form is undiminished and unyielding.

According to statements by members of the committee not a single vote has changed as a result of the President's exposition of the treaty provisions; on the contrary opponents of the league asserted that the President's explanation of many of the disputed points was unconvincing and that some of the statements made by him will only tend to solidify the opposition.

It was authoritatively stated that when the committee began the actual work of passing on amendments offered to the treaty it will adopt the large number of the amendments prepared by Senator Pittman, which will take the United States out of the treaty arrangement and leave the nations of Europe alone to enforce the engagements against Germany.

The Republican members of the committee, among whom are some of the most uncompromising opponents of the league of nations in the senate, one and all declared that the President's explanation had failed to satisfy their objections to the covenant and that ratification of the treaty without reservation has less chance now than it had some time ago. There is a general belief that the President will find it necessary to accept some of the reservations in place of the mild interpretation which he had suggested.

One thing that stands out in bold relief as a result of the conference is that the committee is not going to be hurried into action on the treaty. Today it will go on with its sessions just as though it had never heard from the President. More witnesses will be heard by the committee on reasons for the Shantung decision and it is expected that additional light will be cast on the betrayal of China by the American peace delegation.

Professor E. T. Williams and Captain Morsback are the witnesses who will be heard. Both were connected in one capacity or another with the American peace delegations as experts.

The committee is determined to get at the bottom of the Shantung affair. In today's conference the President took direct issue with Secretary Lansing's testimony in the matter of Japan's pledge to quit the peace conference unless her demands for Shantung were granted. Secretary Lansing told the committee that Japan would have come in anyway, even if her demands were rejected; at the President flatly stated that Japan would have remained out of the league unless she got Shantung.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Urging that the Senate expedite the ratification of the peace treaty, President Wilson opened his conference with members of the Senate Foreign relations committee at the White House by making a long statement, in which he said:

That the preservation of our National life to all conditions absolutely depends upon getting the treaty out of the way.

That until it is out of the way, the mines, factories and business of the country, both domestic and foreign, will be at tremendous disadvantage.

That Great Britain and other nations that have ratified the treaty will get the jump on the United States

NEW AUTO LIGHT LAW EXPLAINED BY THE STATE POLICE

There appears to be a great deal of uncertainty and misinformation floating about concerning the new law "regulating the use of vehicles on the public highways; requiring lights on certain vehicles; and providing penalties for the violation thereof." Having had a number of requests concerning same The Progress took the matter up for the information of our readers and the public generally and publish herewith the provisions of the act relating to lights. We secured a copy of the act through the courtesy of Sergeant O'Donnell, of the local State constabulary, who also informed us it is the duty of the State constables to assist the municipal authorities of the State in enforcing the law.

That part of the law applicable to lights, with the penalties attached follows:—

AN ACT

Regulating the use of vehicles on the public highways; requiring lights on certain vehicles; and providing penalties for the violation thereof.

Section 1. Be it enacted, &c., That on and after the first day of July, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, from one hour after sunset until one hour before sunrise, or whenever it is impossible to distinguish substantial objects at a distance of two hundred feet, there shall be displayed upon every vehicle excepting agricultural machinery and such as are propelled by hand or are loaded with hay or straw in bulk, while standing or in motion upon any public highway in the State of Pennsylvania, at least one white light, which shall be clearly visible for a distance of at least two hundred (200) feet from both the front and rear of such vehicle.

Section 4. The term "public highway," as used in this act, shall include all roads, streets, avenues, alleys, and public places and all public bridges and the approaches thereto.

Section 5. Constables and police officers of the cities, boroughs, incorporated towns, townships, and counties, in Pennsylvania, and members of the State Police Force, may arrest, upon view and without warrant any person violating any of the provisions of this act.

Section 6. Any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be subject to a fine of not less than two ($2.00) dollars nor more than five ($5.00) dollars for each offense, to be collected by summary conviction before any Burgess, alderman, magistrate, or justice of the peace, which fine shall be paid into the treasury of the city, borough, incorporated town, or township, wherein the offense has occurred. In the case of nonpayment of such fine, such person shall undergo an imprisonment in the county prison for a period not exceeding five (5) days.

Section 7. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed; but nothing in this act shall affect or limit special requirements for the display of lights or the regulation and restrictions placed upon

WANTS PAID FOR HIS INCINERATED FORD FLIVER

The possibilities of a Henry Ford are almost limitless but there are some things you can't do with one of the dadblamed things. Stanley Kava, who lives in the Houtzdale region, is now aware of at least one of these things.

On June 8th last Stanley and his Ford were rattling along their way up near Coalport when they ran across or alongside of one Barney Mesagher, who runs a coal mine for Jerome Thomas. At this mine is a gasoline pump used to pump water out of the workings. As Stanley drove in sight the pump stopped for lack of gasoline and Barney hailed the driver of the passing flivver and asked for a loan of gas. Being a good Samaritan Stanley fell for Barney's blarney and backed up to the pump to give up the poor old Ford's lifeblood.

The transfusion was started alright, but as sometimes happens the operation was a success but it was derailed on the patient. One of the assistants struck a match and at once a great light dawned upon everybody connected with the affair. The passing gas caught fire and so did the Ford. Result—Stanley was sans gas and also sans Ford. In addition thereto he was sans speech until he got his second wind.

He demanded of the coal operator the sum of $500, as he blamed Barney's actions on his employer and there you are. Thomas refused to settle and Stanley employed Attorney John B. McGrath to invoke the aid of the Clearfield county courts in collecting same.

The suit to compel Thomas to pay was filed in the Prothonotary's office yesterday. Stanley wants $350 for the incinerated Ford and $150 for his wounded feelings, etc.

Fans are carried by men and women of every rank in China. It is a compliment to invite a friend or distinguished guest to write some sentiment on the host's fan as a memento of any special occasion.

motor vehicles.

The foregoing is a true and correct copy of the Act of the General Assembly No. 225.

CYRUS E. WOODS.
This law went into effect on July 1st but on account of lack of general information concerning the requirements of the Act the constabulary has not been enforcing same strictly up to this time.

No particular style or make or light is required by the law, and any light which will comply with the terms of same is usable.

Contrary to reports no arrests have been made up to this time.

BULLETIN. WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20.—The United States Senate passed the repeal bill of daylight saving today by a vote of 57 to 19 and as the House has already passed the repealer over the veto of the President the country will go back to its peace-time, sun-time way of living the first Monday in October this year.

HUNT FOR BANDITS THAT HOPELESS CLOUDBURST OBLITERATES TRAIL

EL PASO, TEXAS, Aug. 20.—Four companies of the Eighth U. S. Cavalry, reinforced by four army airplanes from Fort Bliss resumed their hunt at dawn today for the bandits who held Lieutenants Peterson and Davis for ransom after a night spent in a farm camp in the barren wastes of the Ojinda country. The American force headed by Captain Matlock and led by the two released aviators as guides, took up the almost hopeless task after the trail had been obliterated by a cloud burst last night. The only contact with the Mexicans was reported by one of the airplane pilots who returned with the wings of his plane riddled with bullets after having exchanged shots at a low altitude, using his machine gun and killing, he believes, one Mexican.

Before leaving to cross the border Captain Matlock said, "We are going to get back that ransom money." Matlock is a regular army officer of eighteen years experience. He is a Kentuckian and familiar with mountain trails. The country in which the cavalymen are searching for the bandits is of the wildest in Northern Mexico. The troops carry only meagre rations on pack mules.

RAILWAY EXECUTIVES STATE PLAN WANTED FOR RAILWAY OPERATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20.—Continuation of present railroad rates and governmental guarantee of standard return was advocated before the House Interstate Commerce Committee as the only way of preventing disaster to the transportation system of the nation by Thomas Dewitt Cuyler, Chairman of the American Association of Railway Executives. Other recommendations were: the creation of a federal constitutional board having general oversight of railroad problems with a view to looking after the interests of the public. Maintenance of rates at a level which will permit of equitable wage schedules and the efficient upkeep of all equipment. A fair return on the value of the property used in public service and permit of extensions of service to meet the increasing needs.

GERMANS AND POLISH CLASH WHICH BRINGS MARTIAL LAW FOR SILICIA

BERLIN, Aug. 20.—Martial law has been declared in Upper Silicia as a result of clashes between the German and Polish forces. The German government minimizes the seriousness of the situation but admits that nineteen Germans have been killed. Chancellor Baur has told the German National Assembly at Weimar that the Polish government or people as a whole are not interested in the affair as the clash was purely local in character.

CHICAGO U. S. ATTORNEY FINDS MANY MERCHANTS TO BE PLAYING UNFAIR

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 20.—Announcing that a secret watch has been kept on 2100 Chicago retail grocers, Chas. S. Cline, U. S. District Attorney, today declared that he had compiled an "unfair list" which was headed by one grocer who had charged as high as nineteen cents for sugar and $4.86 for potatoes. The evidence will be turned over to the September Grand Jury and arrests will follow.

Dollar Day will be what you make it. The housewife should make a round of every store in the city that displays the Dollar Day sign. But beware of the store that doesn't display the sign which indicates that they had a desire to co-operate with the consumer.

According to the Superior Court decision on the sale of near beer, every storekeeper, restaurant man and all pool room operators in the country who have been selling near beer, and that will include seventy-five per cent. of all the merchants of the county, are violators of the Brooks High License Law. While many of these people were simply waiting to take advantage of a loop hole in the law which would permit a trafficking in alcoholic content beverages we venture that the larger part of these people were ignorant of the consequences involved in the handling of an alcoholic beverage. Now that the Superior Court ruling is known there is no longer any doubt of the risk being taken by those who are engaged in the business.

Another Editor and What He Saw

The guy who pulls down his salary as religious editor of The Progress has not been seen since the crap shooting episode, or at least he will not admit his identity so today we will have to shove our humane editor to the front. Our humane editor has a heart as tender as can be when it comes to children and he hopes that the subject of this article will read this column. The subject is a woman, to be exact—a young mother—accompanied by a little chap, or chapine, if that is correct for the slang of feminine gender, who, because the child walked out of the post office while the mother was addressing a letter, caught the little one by the hand, yanked it at least three feet in the air and carried it into the office to be roughly dropped on the floor where it lay shrieking with the pain of drawn and strained tender ligaments. Possibly this is not a fair subject for editorial comment but it got on our nerves and it had to come off, so now we feel better.

The almost royal honors paid to Beth Cavell at her funeral hours in Westminster Abbey typify the tribute paid by the nation to the part which women have taken in the world war—in their work, their aid and their sacrifices. Their work has been one of money and ministrations, but in many cases they have done it at the front under fire and at the risk of their lives, certainly of their comfort and health. When the history of the war comes to be written, the unprecedented part taken in it by women will be among its strong redeeming parts.

The Cincinnati Enquirer wants to cross the hen with the oyster because the oyster produces 400,000 eggs annually. We think the oyster might improve the hen, not so much because of the greater egg output, but in the possible silencing of the cockle. But if the hen should produce 400,000 eggs annually—well, good-night.

Complete collections of official recruiting posters, window cards and war loan posters issued in Great Britain during the war are now selling for more than $500 each.

Fifteen millions and a half women will be eligible to vote in the next presidential election. People still oppose the principle of equal suffrage, but they no longer laugh at it. Nobody with the faintest interest in politics could laugh at any principle which can command that many votes.

The transportation of liquor on trains is prohibited—the Supreme court says the statute is all right. Doesn't that pecuniate conductors equipping themselves with stomach pumps so as to empty the animated receptacles that find their way into the coaches?

The private who successfully promoted himself up to lieutenant colonel without due formality of military regulations, and got away with it, as well as from the minions of the law, ought at least to have a war-cross for his nerve.

We read that Russia will want about $1,000,000,000 worth of goods from the outside world as soon as peace comes. Well, Russia has only to make peace with herself in order to get the things she wants.

Why We Welcome Small Accounts

Many people believe that a bank does not want small accounts.

In such accounts, however, the profits are mutual.

The bank that encourages small accounts often sees them grow into large ones.

The possession of a bank account inspires the depositor to saving habits, and teaches him to be business-like.

We are glad to serve the small depositor, believing his connection with the bank will benefit both him and ourselves.

FAMILY REUNION OF BRANCH OF BARRATT FAMILY

The beautiful East End residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Mather was the scene of a very nice gathering of relatives of Mrs. Mather, who, before her marriage was Jane Ann Barratt, a half sister of Thomas W. Barratt.

Mrs. Mather's only full brother Isaac Barratt died last February.

His only children, two daughters and their husbands and children motored here last week to enjoy surprising their only aunt.

The whole party consisted of: Mr. and Mrs. J. Price Wertz, proprietor of the Lewistown Steam Laundry and their daughters Mrs. D. L. Hinebaugh and little son Dan Jr., Miss Dolly Wertz, and their sons Paul, Jacob and Frederick Wertz motored from Lewistown.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Gregg, scientific farmer of Newport and little sons Emmet and Billy motored from Newport.

The relations from town consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Roessner the latter the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mather and their sons Bill and Phil Roessner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederick Hastings the latter the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mather and their children Dorothy, Robert and Lenore Hastings.

Thomas Barratt who until recently made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Mather.

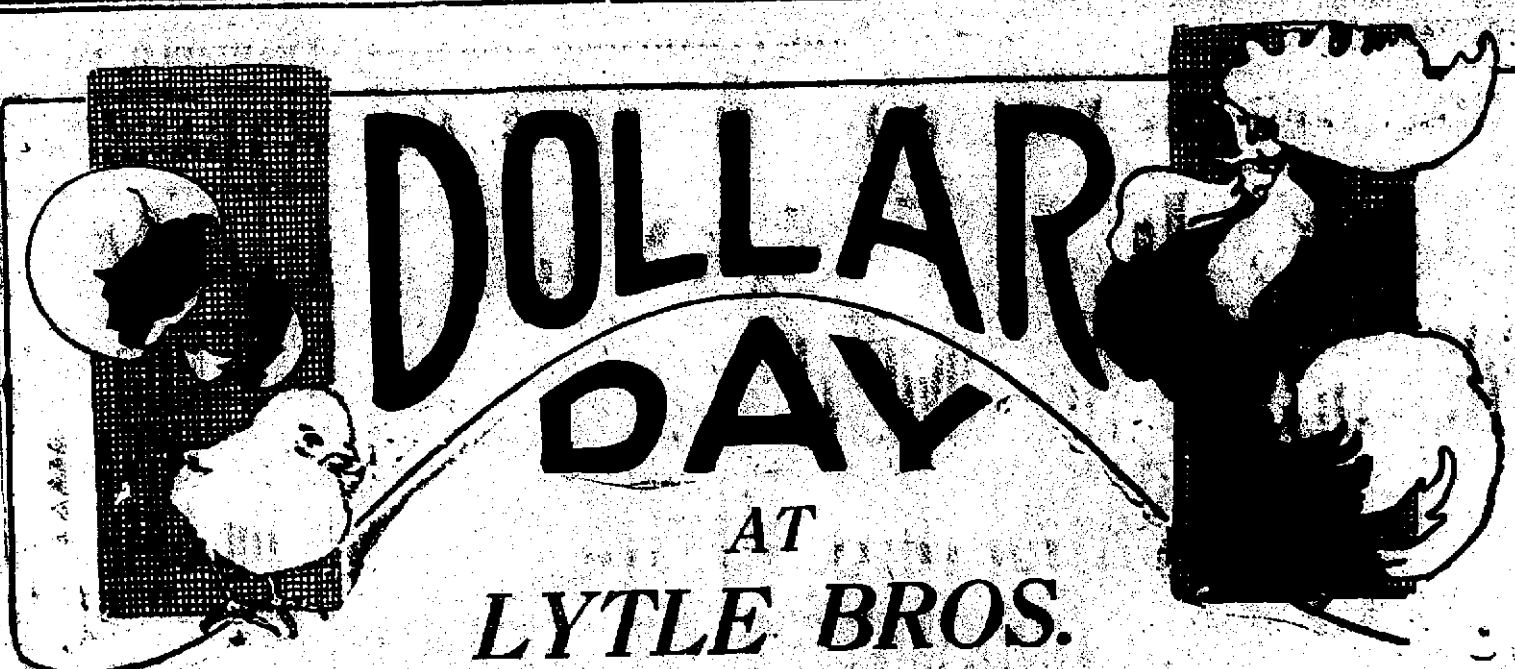

Miss Grace Barratt grand daughter of Mr. Barratt.

Harry C. Pooler whose engagement to Miss Lois Mather was recently announced.

Miss Catherine Elliott, of Rossiter, who makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Roessner.

The host and hostess and their daughters Misses Lois and Bernice and son Master Leeland Mather.

These jolly children and agreeable older people enjoyed nearly a week of pleasure and all hope for and look forward to repeating the event in the near future.

The Ladies' Bazaar

South Second Street Clearfield, Penna.

(National Crop Improvement Service.)

In some states a farmer has no reason to keep his property fenced. In other states it is necessary to keep the stock fenced to protect the man who has no fences.

The advantage of good fencing is so apparent that it needs no argument. It is necessary to pasture each field every four or five years and therefore

Corner Post Anchors

A corner post, being subject to a tremendous pull from two directions, is supplied with three anchors. It is set in the hole 4 to 4 1/2 feet deep, as in the illustration.

The illustration shows a corner post being driven into the ground by a machine.

Key must be fenced from each other

Each proper cross fencing. Livestock thus controlled, gives much better results than when left to run at large.

Baltimore is making elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the national convention of the War Mothers of America, which is to meet in that city in October.

New York theatrical producers report a shortage of chorus girls, notwithstanding the fact that their wages have doubled within the past several years.

making it much easier to feed, water, milk, ship, brand, etc.

A good fence adds far more than its actual cost to the value of the farm.

A steel fence allows bug and weed dormitories to be burned out during the winter, destroying in this way millions of pests which could not otherwise be controlled.

If well galvanized and if the wires are of proper size and weight, the life of a fence is many years. If wooden corner posts are used, the illustration will show the best way to set them. However, the life of the best wooden post is seldom more than ten years while a galvanized steel post set in concrete and braced both ways with steel corner braces also anchored in concrete will last indefinitely. Just how long would be impossible to state because galvanized posts were not made before twenty years ago and they are all still giving good service.

The hollow steel line post when driven will spread at the bottom in such a way that it will anchor firmly without digging any post holes.

Steel fences erected on all-steel posts are absolute lightning insurance because the current is discharged at every post, lightning always taking the easiest way to the ground. Even should the fence be struck, the live stock will not be severely shocked even when huddled into a corner.

A well-built woven wire fence on steel posts is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY OCCASION

An exceptionally enjoyable birthday party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Norris on South Second street today. It was in the nature of a double, we might say triple celebration. Mr. Norris celebrated his birthday on Tuesday and as today was the natal day of his twin daughters they decided to have a sort of quiet family reunion. Accordingly the daughters, Mrs. Anna Sahm, of Harrisburg, and Mrs. Alice Heinn, of Sunbury, arrived home last evening prepared to join with "Daddy" in taking proper note of the double or triple occasion.

Mrs. Norris had everything in apple-pie shape for the happy occasion and it was indeed a most enjoyable family gathering.

INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

While autoing up the state road towards Curwensville last night Dr. L. F. Stewart and John Dimeling met with an accident which resulted in considerable damage to the doctors car and slight injuries to Mr. Dimeling. The dense fog blinded the driver who side swiped the fence on the side of the road.

LACE FROCK IN FAVOR IN PARIS

Material Is Considered One of Most Important for Afternoon Wear.

DARK SILK DRESSES PASSE

Gowns Considered Sufficiently Elaborate for Daytime Functions, if Embroidered or Otherwise Embellished, Are Passing Out.

Deauville, Aix-les-Bains and Monte Carlo are principal points of interest on the fashion program. Paris, which is to say all of fashionable Paris, has betaken itself to the smart resorts in France, so it is necessary to follow closely, asserts a prominent New York fashion writer, if one is to keep in touch with the latest developments in dress.

Always on the alert, Paris traveled to the races, but many of the best people were absent and the midweek fairs failed the dressmakers at the last moment, so that there were fewer new frocks than had been expected. Happily most of the troubles are over and the best houses have promised interesting and important changes. However, we are left to guess what the changes are to be, though a few of the models give some important clues and the assurance that whatever the changes may be one may be certain that they will be interesting.

The elegance of the pre-war toilettes is repeatedly mentioned and there is every indication that eventually the more elaborate manner of dressing will return. Lace, which has long since been discarded, is considered one of the most important materials for afternoon wear.

Many and conflicting were the comments on its use at the races, but in spite of adverse opinion it was noted that as the days passed by and the makers had an opportunity of showing new models the lace dresses increased in numbers.

An all-lace frock was contemptuously referred to as a lace curtain, but nevertheless the dress was repeated later by other women.

The widely diverging views in regard to the use of lace are to be expected, for there is no more difficult material to handle, and if used the frock is sure to be either a decided success or a miserable failure.

This creation is a combination of rich all-over cream lace and gold and blue-flowered chiffon. Hat is of black, glazed Milan, with great yellow organdie rose.

Paris is surely correct when following its usual rule of never doing things by half-way measures. It selects the widest laces possible and drapes them over something dark to give the pattern the best advantage. Other models illustrate the use of black and white Chantilly, used in the same dress with a most refreshing effect.

New Models Favoring Lace.

Callot, Chéruit and Pierre Bulloz are all making use of quantities of lace in the summer models, which they always show in midseason for the benefit of their resident Paris clientele. French women have always been partial to lace for afternoon wear and know how to wear it to the best advantage. Where the American woman is prone to place with it a hat that

OBITUARY

W. FREDERICK SHAW

W. Frederick Shaw passed to his eternal rest Tuesday morning, Aug. 12th, 1919 at 7:15 p. m.

Mr. Shaw had been in failing health for about one year and had been confined to his bed for about six weeks. Although warned of his serious condition his friends still hoped that he would rally and be about again.

He had demonstrated a strong constitution and high vitality which was marvelous to those who knew his age and the condition of his heart. Death was caused by a complication of diseases and the best care and medical aid could not combat the conditions existing to one of his age.

W. Frederick Shaw was born November 1st, 1841 at Goshen and was nearing his 78th milestone. He was the son of Robert and Sophia Schnarrs Shaw and most of his life was spent in the community in which he was born.

He followed farming and lumbering until he located in Clearfield in 1901 and where he has since resided, on Weaver street.

W. Frederick Shaw was married March 12th, 1863 to Sarah Jane Trump who survives to share the great loss with the following children: Mrs. Rush Bumgarner, Woodland, Pa.; W. Elmer Shaw, Mrs. Harry Spence, Ira C. Shaw; Reese E. Shaw all of Clearfield and Miss Effie at home.

There also survives him twenty-three grand children and twenty-six great grand-children. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw had been married for 56 years and six years ago celebrated their golden wedding.

To those who knew W. Frederick Shaw best he was most loved, and his even temperament, his sincerity and honesty with those he came in contact with made it possible for him to live and die without a known enemy. He was a member of the Methodist church during the past 30 years and after moving to Clearfield transferred to the West Side M. E. church, with which he affiliated to the end, and he passed away in the faith by which he lived and which made him the kind and loving father and husband and the patient sufferer which he was. He passed into the great beyond with a smile on his countenance which seemed to radiate from a soul on its homeward flight to the God who breathed into it the breath of life.

What greater heritage could man leave his friends,
When life with its joy and sorrow ends,
Than the assurance that in life "He did his best"
And now claims God's promise of Eternal Rest.

MARY ELLEN SHAW

Mary Ellen Shaw, relict of the late Richard Gilmore Shaw, passed away suddenly at her home, corner of Fulton and West Front streets Monday morning, August 18, 1919, aged 81 years. The deceased was a former resident of Goshen township, having removed to Clearfield to reside with her sons when her late husband retired from farm work some ten or twelve years ago.

Mrs. Shaw was of the finest type of Christian womanhood, whose every thought was of her home and loved ones. She was an earnest consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church from early girlhood, closely following the teachings of the Master in her daily life and conduct. She was ever the tender, loving mother and her sudden taking away was a sad shock to her family.

She is survived by the following children: Mrs. McClellan Owens, of Woodland; Harry L., Epra T. and Cecil Shaw, all of Clearfield and Mrs. Edwin Cooper, of Erie, Pa.

The funeral occurred this afternoon, services being held at the West Goshen Methodist Episcopal church with interment in Goshen cemetery.

HAVE FUN WHILE GETTING TOYS FOR KIDDIES

For the past week some of the children of West Market street have been quietly practicing for a play which had the initial showing yesterday afternoon on the lawn at the Dowler home. Elizabeth Dowler and Bernice Anderson coached the children, the play being "Adventures in Toyland." Each child represented a different kind of doll. By the time for the evening performance the fame of the show had traveled so that grown-ups and children from all over town were there. By charging 10c admission they were able to clear over $17.00 which the children are going to use in fitting up the Children's Home with play apparatus. Good work. Somebody else do likewise.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Brasser at their residence on Susquehanna avenue, South Side, on Monday evening, a son.

Mrs. W. F. Patton is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Russell, arriving from New York City last evening.

The Mothers Meeting will be held in the basement parlor of the Presbyterian church Thursday evening, Aug. 28th.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. will sell ice cream during the evening of Labor Day on Dr. Blair's lawn.

Large streamers have been stretched across the main thoroughfare of this town announcing "Labor Day celebration" and reception and dinner for the returned soldier boys.

Frank Athens, manager of the Sugar Bowl left for Ohio today, his objective point being Okron. It is stated by his intimate friends that he is looking up a new business location.

"All is not gold that glitters." Some half dozen Curwensville boys who were lured to Ohio towns by the big money that was to be made there have returned home and are now seemingly satisfied that old Curwensville is good enough town for them to live in.

All patriotic ladies who are members of Rebekah lodge are requested to be present at the regular meeting to be held in Odd Fellows hall Thursday evening, August 21st, for the purpose of outlining plans for the Labor Day anniversary. This meeting will be of vital importance to the welfare of the lodge, and every member should be present.

A colored lad aged about four years, a son of Samuel Bryan and whose parents reside in one of the houses at the brickyard was wading in the creek yesterday afternoon, when he accidentally stepped on a piece of glass and severed the tendon of the heel. Dr. Blair was summoned and considered the wound of such a character as to warrant sending the lad to Clearfield hospital for surgical treatment.

William Russell, who spent a week or so visiting his sister, Mrs. Ganoe at West Point, returned home yesterday evening, accompanied by his niece Constance Ganoe, who will spend some time with her grand parents Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Russell.

The Alumni of the Curwensville High school are making extensive plans for their annual picnic at the Irwin park tomorrow afternoon and evening at which time the Ladies Aid of the Baptist church have arranged to sell ice cream and coffee.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Maurey attended the wedding of Mr. Maurey's niece, Miss Kathleen Maurey to Thomas Beers, of Harrisburg, which took place Tuesday morning at the home of the brides parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maurey of Grampian. Mr. and Mrs. Beers will make their future home at Harrisburg, Pa.

HAPPY WOMEN

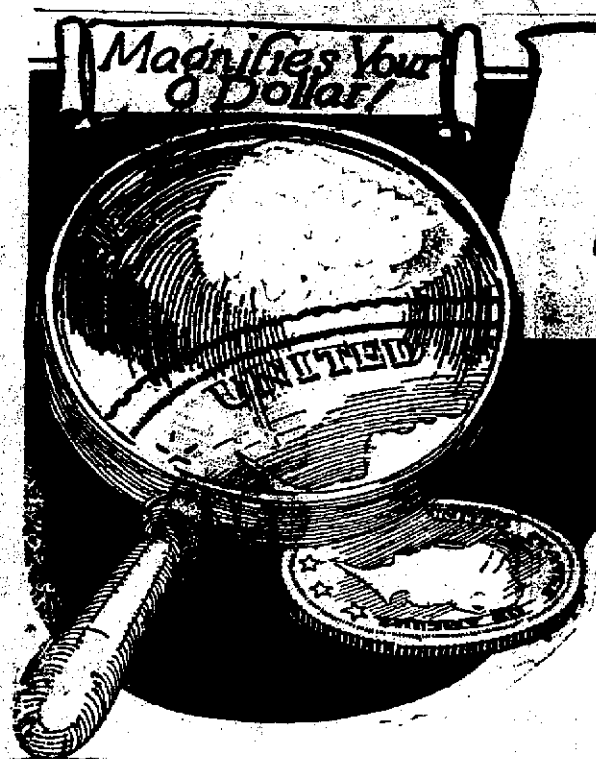

Plenty of Them in Clearfield and Good Reason for it. Wouldn't any woman be happy. After years of backache suffering, Days of misery, nights of unrest, The distress of urinary troubles, When she finds freedom Many readers will profit by the following.

Mrs. C. H. Graham, 484-8th street, Clearfield, says "About a year ago I had an attack of kidney trouble. I was restless and had painful headaches. I also had a bad pain in my back, which I noticed mostly when I bent over. I found Doan's Kidney Pills to give me great relief. I am glad to endorse them for the benefit of other kidney sufferers."

WORK AND SAVE IS REMEDY
FOR HIGH PRICE EPIDEMIC

Federal Reserve Board Tells U. S. Senate How Thrift Will Bring Relief.

Washington, Aug. 20.—"To work and save" is the remedy for the increasing cost of living pointed out recently by the Federal Reserve Board.

In reply to an inquiry from the Senate Banking Committee asking if it was advisable to attempt contraction of currency by legislation in the hope of reducing prices, Governor Harding wrote Chairman McLean that the growth in the volume of circulating notes was the effect and not the cause of advancing wages and prices, and that the war period of finance would not be over until government obligations, now carried by the banks are absorbed through the actual savings of the people.

Strong censure of strikes and extravagance was implied in Mr. Harding's letter, which did not, however, undertake to blame any one section of the population, but referred to the nation as a whole, especially to the relation of economies practiced during the war and the purchase now of non-essential articles by persons enjoying large incomes for the first time.

"The Federal Reserve Board believes that any currency legislation at this time is unnecessary and undesirable," Mr. Harding wrote, "and would suggest that the remedy for the present situation is to work and to save, to work regularly and efficiently, in order to distribute the largest possible volume of commodities, and to exercise reasonable economies in order that money, goods and services may be devoted primarily to the liquidation of debt and to the satisfaction of the demand for necessities, rather than to indulge in extravagances or the gratification of a desire to luxuriate."

The government is doing everything to promote reasonable saving. Government Thrift and Savings Stamps and U. S. Treasury Savings Certificates permit of regular saving in amounts from 25 cents to $1000 invested in safe securities to fit every person's need.

Bank clerks are wondering if the end of the war means another set holiday, to be observed every year.

Now that all our women have learned to knit will the home folk have warmer feet than usual this winter?

The End of a Perfect Day

THE CLEARFIELD PROGRESS, CLEARFIELD, PA. WEDNESDAY EVENING AUGUST 20, 1919

CHAPTER I.

The Last Round.

An oily sea! Stillness—absolute stillness, save for the groan and creak of the yards and booms, as the dark rolled lifelessly on the long, shimmering swell. Not a breath of air; only a stifling heat that beat upon the decks until the pitch in the seams bubbled.

Only a waste of water that reflected the mercurial tropic glare of the sun and hurt the eyes cruelly.

Under an awning in the stern a man in cotton shirt and trousers, who was huddled in a chair by the cabin skylight, lifted his head and mumbled through cracked lips.

"Twenty grains of calomel, twenty-four quinine—magnesia, peppermint-water gone."

His hands fumbled with the drugs from the ship's medicine chest that strewed the skylight, and guessing at the quantities, carried portions to his mouth. He swallowed with difficulty, and relapsed into a huddled position.

After a little he raised his head once more, and began to count upon his fingers. One, two, three, four, five—was it five or eight days, or ten, or a month that the calm had lasted? He did not know. He had lost all track of time. But it worried him, and to his sick brain assumed very vital proportions. The ship's log would tell him.

He reached for it and began to scan the entries. It was strange that trying to read brought red flashes and pain to his eyes.

The words came only to him in snatches.

"October 10. Still becalmed. Intense heat. Native boatswain took sick this morning."

"October —. Buried boatswain last night. Four more of crew down. We've got yellow fever aboard. God help us if we don't get a breeze!"

His eyes went on down the page in a haphazard, irresponsible way, skipping entries here and there unconsciously.

"Still becalmed. God have mercy on us! Native crew all down. Chinaman named Won Su, after making a murderous attack in his delirium on Wallen, the first mate, jumped overboard."

Yes, he remembered that. He was Wallen—Stacey Wallen—the first mate of the bark Upolo. It had been a horrible sight.

The poor devil had rushed at him screaming and—he shuddered a little—he did not want to think of that. What was this entry here?

"The heat is horrible. Survivors too weak to bury the dead. Captain Mitchell died at 2:10 a. m."

That was the last entry. There wasn't any date on it. He couldn't remember whether it had been yesterday or the day before. Well, what did it matter; and, anyway, it was time to make rounds.

Rounds! What rounds were there to make? Everybody was dead. Johnson, the second mate, had died that morning, though he hadn't made the entry of Johnson's death in the log; what was the good? There wasn't any more use for a log. Everybody was dead except Making Rounds Was Over Now.

cept himself—the other two white men and the crew, who were all natives. And now he was down, too; he was only waiting for the fever to run its course.

That would take maybe a few hours more.

A voice within him seemed to keep whispering: "Rounds! You've got to make rounds, make rounds." For two days or nights, or whenever it was since Johnson had first taken sick, he had made rounds unceasingly with the medicines; that was why the medicines were on the skylight, so that he wouldn't have to go below.

But making rounds was over now; there was no one to make rounds for—there was only himself. "Rounds! Make rounds! It's time to make rounds!" the voice insisted.

He roused himself. Yes, that was so. Last time he had gone along the deck Ting Wah was still alive. The man would be dead now probably, and the medicines weren't any good, anyway; it was air, God's air, that was wanted. "Rounds! Make rounds!"

He staggered up from his chair, collected some drugs and, reeling to the ship's side where the rail would help support him, made his way painfully forward to where another awning was stretched over the fore-deck. He kept his eyes in front of him; there were shapes about the deck covered with anything that had first come to hand—shapes that should not have been there only at the last Johnson and he had been too weak to do anything but throw coverings over them. He didn't want to look at the shapes.

There was one form, only one, that was uncovered, and he knelt beside it. Ting Wah was still alive.

"Medicine," said Wallen hoarsely. The Chinaman pushed it away.

"No can take," he answered weakly. "Me finish."

Wallen steadied himself with an effort, and looked at the other closely.

It was near the end; but still, as under certain conditions it sometimes did, the disease had left the man's intelligence unimpaired.

"Look here, old chap," said Wallen cheerfully through his own cracked lips. "You never know. Buck up. Take the medicine." He stopped to lift the other's head gently, and nearly fell himself in doing it.

A sudden gleam of gratitude came into the Chinaman's eyes.

"You good man," he whispered. "You all same good man. But no can take—all same finish now." He pushed the medicine away again; and then, pinched at Wallen's sleeve, evidently trying to get the mate's head down closer to his lips.

The man was going fast. Wallen tried to force a kindly smile.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Listen!" said Ting Wah. "Mebbe you die too. Mebbe no. All same me tell—you good man—last night bling medicine all night you good man—me tell—"

His voice trailed off weakly.

"Yes?" prompted Wallen kindly.

The man tried to speak, tried again, but without avail.

Wallen's own head was reeling, premonitory of coming nausea.

"It's all right, Ting Wah, it's all right," he said soothingly. "Better not try to talk."

But now Ting Wah, with a desperate effort, raised himself to his elbow.

"Yes, me talk!" he gasped out. "But must talk quick. Me here, Won Su here, four more all same Chinamen come on board and make crew on ship here for all same knife you."

There was contortion in the man's face, a pitiful struggle to fight back the weakness and exhaustion that was upon him. Wallen stared at him in a dazed way.

"Kill me, Ting Wah!" he cried out.

"What for? You—you don't know what you're saying, do you? You don't mean that!" The Chinaman's elbow was slipping gradually away from beneath him, his eyes were closed. The medicine spilled from Wallen's hands onto the deck, and he caught at the other, propping him up.

"Ting Wah! Ting Wah!" he cried again, shaking the man to rouse him. "What do you mean? Ting Wah, don't you hear me! What did you mean to kill me for?"

There was no answer. The man was—no, not yet! Ting Wah's lips were moving. Wallen bent his head still closer to catch the words.

"Drink-House Sam—Singapore—him know."

That was all. It was over now. Wallen straightened up unsteadily, and lurched to the rail where he could cling on to something.

Six Chinamen had shipped as part of the crew so that they could kill him. Why? He laughed in a sick fashion. What did it matter? They were all dead, those six—and every one else—and in a few hours he would be dead too. He laughed again, a little hysterically. This Drink-House Sam of Singapore, whoever he was, ought to be satisfied with that!

He clawed his way back to the after-deck, and dropped into his chair again. His brain seemed to go numb for a time, to be indifferent to everything—and then suddenly to become strangely active. Six Chinamen had shipped as members of the crew so that they could kill him. It wasn't a pleasant thought, even if the whole six were dead now, and that he himself would be dead, too, before long.

Oh, yes, he believed it now, right enough—why shouldn't he? What about that murderous attack Won Su had made upon him, and that he had thought was delirium! But that wasn't all, he had reason beside that

THE IMPOSTOR

To believe Tung Wah's story; reason enough, God knew! now that he came to think of the things that were crowding into his mind.

Out of the shimmering heat waves that rose along the deck and seemed to hover so weirdly over those covered shapes that ought not to have been there, another scene gradually took form, at first indistinctly, vaguely, then in sharp outline, startling, distinct.

It was a stone house, a gray stone house, all by itself, without neighbors, isolated, a silent place. Yes, he remembered it! It seemed to him a chill upon him now—the cold, dreary, lifeless house had done its best to crush even a laugh out of his boyhood with its eternal, silent brooding mystery. That was why he had run away ten years ago, when he was fifteen.

All his earlier recollections were of that place.

His mother wasn't there, he had never seen his mother. There were just his father, and that tall, swarthy Eastern servant, who frightened his boy's heart—just those two and himself. He never saw anyone else.

No one ever came to the house. No one was ever admitted. Gunga, the servant, fetched the supplies from the nearby village. His own education was superintended by his father. But there had never been any intimacy between his father and himself.

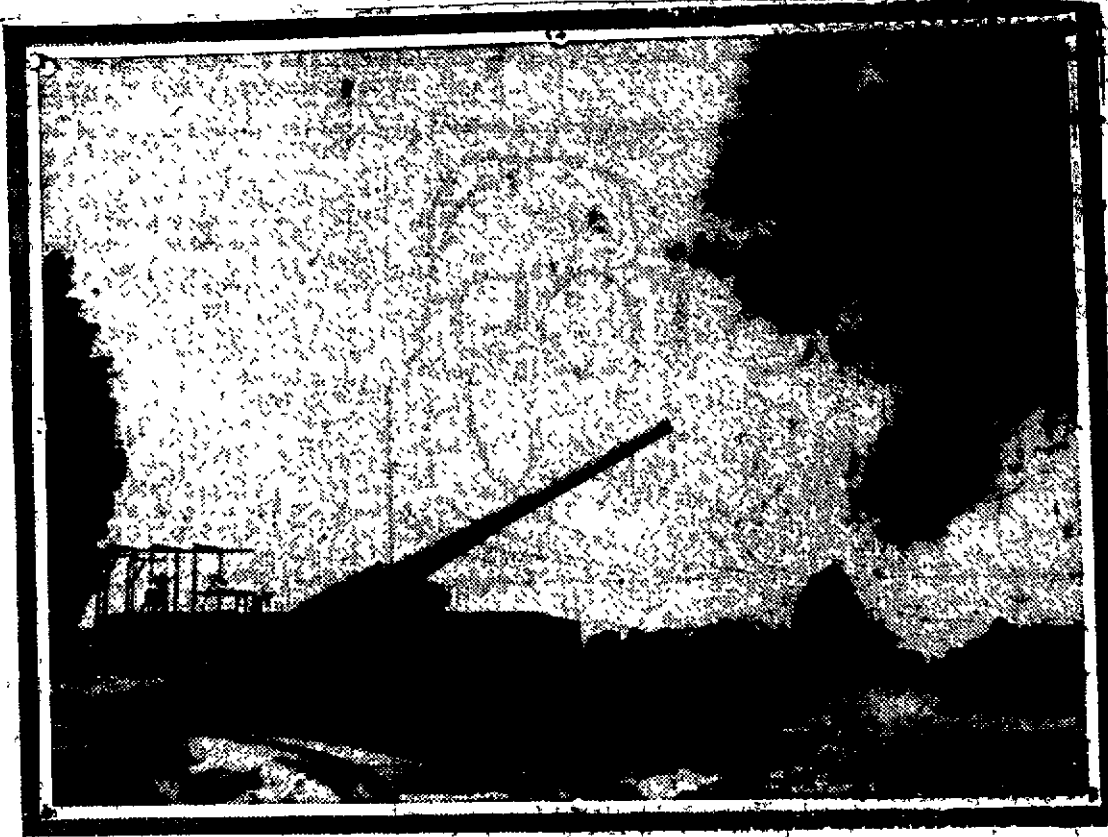

He had never questioned his father but once—after that he had never dared to do so. He remembered the deadly whiteness that had come over the morose, taciturn face, the grip of iron upon his shoulder, the hoarse passion in his father's voice.

"Never speak to me again of that," his father had said. "When you are older, when the time comes, you shall know."

Wallen rocked unsteadily in his chair. What a frightful stretch the ship possessed—or was it only his imagination? What was it he had been thinking of? Oh, yes, the six Chinamen. He had come to kill him, and the house where there were so many doors and locks, and where every night his father and Gunga turned the keys and the chains rattled on the doors as they fastened them.

He raised his hand and passed it across his eyes in a startled way. How vividly it came back to him, that night—as though it were just happening now, as though he were in the very act of living it again!

A crash in the dead of night through that silent house, and he had sat up, trembling, in bed. Then a cry, the report of a pistol shot, and the echoes of the shot rumbled and reverberated through the house, striking terror into his young heart. And he was crawling out of his bed, and out into the hall and down the stairs in his nightshirt.

And half-way down he stopped in horror.

Below, in the hallway, stood the giant form of his father holding a candle, and on the floor lay stretched a huddled form, and Gunga, with a revolver, was bending over the Thing that did not move. Then came his father's voice, in a strange, queer note of tense eagerness.

"Look again, Gunga. Has he one finger on the left hand?"

And Gunga had shaken his head as he had answered.

"I have looked, sahib, and the hand is whole."

Spelthound he had stood there on the stairs, a lad of fourteen, and Gunga had lifted the Thing in his arms and gone away with it; and the great figure of his father, dressed in pajamas, had stood motionless for a long time, then turning had faced the stairs and caught sight of him—and suddenly had sent a wild, unnatural laugh ringing through the house.

"You there, eh, Stacey?" he had laughed out, as though unmanned,

"Well, I'll tell you something now. Never go to the East. Remember that—never go to the East."

And then he had pulled himself together, and his face had set sternly as he had pointed up the stairs. "Go back to your bed!" he had commanded sharply. "Go back to your bed instantly!"

"Yes," said Wallen aloud to himself. "That's what he said: 'Never go to the East—never go to the East.'"

But he had come to the East and six Chinamen had shipped aboard the Upolo to kill him. His father had been quite right in telling him not to go to the East. How was it that he had come there? He had run away from that gray house after that night, and he had never heard of his father since.

That was in California.

He had gone to Frisco, and gone to sea. He had been at sea ever since in all kinds of ships, and he had done pretty well. He had his master's certificate already.

But that did not account for his being here in the Java sea, and for those six Chinamen. He had been fourth officer of the Tokomaru when they had touched at Shanghai a few weeks ago. She was a fine ship, the Tokomaru, the biggest passenger liner in the fleet—only a fourth officer's pay was very small.

He had met Captain Mitchell of the Upolo ashore there, and Captain Mitchell had persuaded him to ship as first mate on the Upolo for double the pay he had been getting. The Upolo, of course, traded through the Java and Banda seas—that was what his father had meant by the East—touching at Shanghai as a port of call in a liner wasn't the same thing.

How that sun burned through the awning! It seemed to stab and drill into his skull with little shafts of exquisite pain. He could get away from it, of course, by going below into the cabin, by putting the deck between him and that torturing ball of fire, but in the cabin one couldn't breathe.

One couldn't live in the cabin—Captain Mitchell was there and Captain Mitchell was dead.

Had Captain Mitchell anything to do with those six Chinamen? Or anything to do with Drink-House Sam in Sing pore? And where was it those six Chinamen had joined—at Shanghai like himself?

If he could remember that he would know whether Captain Mitchell had

There's A Genuine Walnut Dinning Room Suite In Our Window That Some One Is Going To Get A Real Bargain.
HERE'S HOW YOU'LL GET IT.

At the time we started our great furniture sale we placed this Genuine Walnut Dining Room Suit of ten pieces and of the beautiful Queen Anne design, in the window and began to take ONE DOLLAR per business hour from the regular retail price until the suit was sold. The real value of this suite is $350 and there's a suprisingly low price going on it during the closing hours of Dollar Day. Just figure it out for yourself. Ten hours comprises a business day. That means a Ten Dollar a Day Reduction Until Dollar Day.

$1.00 Off On Every Ten Dollar Purchase On Dollar Day

In other words we simply take one dollar off the retail price--the sale prices that have been in effect during the August Furniture Sale--and that will bring some of the prices on furniture of this sort down to unheard of values. Here's how it works. You buy $50 worth of furniture and we will immediately make the price on Dollar Day $45.

had a hand in the cursed game. Hadn't Johnson said something about new hands? But then native crews were everlastingly shifting about. It was a long way from Singapore to Shanghai. Who was this Drink-House Sam? What was it Ting Wah had said? "Drink-House Sam—him know."

"Him know, him know, him know"—the words began to run through his mind in a singsong, crazy fashion—and then a passionate, merciless anger seized upon him, and the splendid six-foot bulk of the man heaved up from the chair, and, clenched fist raised, he swayed upon his feet.

They had got him! Not the way they had thought to get him—but they had got him. And he could not fight—there was no one to fight—he could only die like a trapped rat, while this Drink-House Sam laughed a thousand miles away!

"Him know, him know, him know"—the words cursed like fire through his brain. He shouted aloud, and the nails of his fingers in his clenched fist bit into the palm of his hand. He could not choke the life, as his own went out, from this devil in Singapore that he had never seen—he could only die.

The uplifted arm, as though too heavy for him, fell to his side, a ghastly whiteness spread over his face, he reeled, clutched at the skylight for support, and slipped prone upon the deck. It was the nausea upon him again.

The virulence of the attack passed after a while, but for a long time he lay where he had fallen, weak and exhausted.

He was semi-delirious when he stood up again, and hung limply against the skylight. Medicine—yes, that was what it meant—that stuff there spilt all about. He put some into his mouth. His eyes fastened on the ship's log open in front of him. What kind of a book was that? What was it doing there? Had he been reading? He couldn't read when he was sick.

It was very strange. No; he remembered now, he had been writing in it. Whenever any of the crew died he wrote it down in the book.

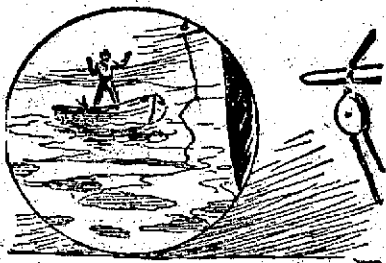

And now the crew was all dead, and he would be dead, too, very soon; therefore he should also write his own name down while he could still write. He remembered it all perfectly now—that was what the book was for.

He lurched forward and picked up the fountain pen from where it had rolled into a broken package of powdered quinine. He lurched, again heavily as he leaned over the book. A nervous twitch of his hand gouged the pen-point into the page and left a blot. He shook his head in a gravely puzzled way.

It was queer that the pen wouldn't write as it had written before; it seemed to travel all over the page, and—he paused, his hand going to his eyes again—it was strange that he couldn't think of his own name!

He was first mate, he knew that; but—yes, his name came back to him now. He wrote on laboriously. He finished the entry, dropped the pen, and stared at what he had written, nodding his head.

"Died today, S. Wallen, first mate." He read the words aloud, and nodded his head again. It was true, quite true. When that damnable sun that was tormenting him through the awning was gone, that would be the end of today and he would be dead.

His eyes strayed forward along the deck—and widened with a dawning fear. What were those shapes there? He began to fumble to himself, and suddenly shrieked out aloud. It was a horror ship.

He shrieked aloud, rushed to the rail, and in the delirium of his mind crouched low to hide himself from this dead throng that raved like demons for medicine, ran screaming forward to where the ship's boat bumped monotonously in its rise and fall against the vessel's hull.

He hurried himself over the side, cast the boat loose, and snatching at the oars began to pull like a madman away from the ship. Two hundred yards off he stood up and shook both fists and yelled tauntingly—they could not reach him now. But why not? Suppose they should swim after him! He flung himself to the seat again and piled the oars furiously.

And then slowly the strokes lessened, and presently an oar fell from his grasp, and after that, with a moan, he pitched forward into the bottom of the boat—and all was blackness.

CHAPTER II.

On the Road to Pobi. "Mon," expostulated the Scotch trader, "but you're fair daff! You're but out of the jaws of death, and I'd no say you're all the way out at that. Bide a bit, there'll be another in a month—or in two, anyhow."

Wallen, standing in the center of the little galvanized-iron-roofed storehouse, his eyes on the native who had entered a moment before, shook his head.

"I've got to get away, MacKnight," he said earnestly. "There's no use talking about it. What kind of a ship does he say it is?"

MacKnight flung out a question in the native tongue.

"He says it is a big smoke-boat," translated the trader, "which will be by way of saying it's some meussy steam coaster that's so small it's no able to accommodate its own cock-roaches, d'ye mind! Mon, pay no attention to it. What's another month or so—and you'll be strong then, and—ah, mon, but I hate to have ye go!"

Wallen, gaunt and thin from his illness, shook his head decisively again, though the other's words had brought a quick responsive smile to his lips.

at Preserving Time

Here is a recipe for preserving syrup that will give you finer jams, jellies and preserves—and save you about one-half your trouble.

Instead of all sugar use only one-half sugar and one-half Karo (Red Label).

You will find this means clear, firm jelly; rich preserves with heavy syrup; and delicious jams, mellow and "fruity". Karo is a fine, clear syrup, with a natural affinity for the juices of the fruit.

It blends the sugar with the fruit juice—brings out all the "fruity" flavor.

Furthermore, it prevents even the richest jam or jelly from "candyng".

It does away with all the uncertainty of preserving, and just about cuts the work in half.

For cooking, Baking and Candy Making Karo (Red Label) is used in millions of homes. In all cooking and baking recipes use Karo instead of sugar. It is sweet, of delicate flavor, and brings out the natural flavor of the food.

FREE A copy of the Corn Products Cook Book is all ready to send to you as soon as we receive your name and address. It contains any number of helps to the woman who expects to make preserves, jams or jellies.

BOOZELESS FRONTIER DAY BIG SUCCESS

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Aug. 18—

United Press—There was an eastern school teacher at the Cheyenne Frontier Days celebration who thought a bulldog figured in the steer bulldogging event.

But she was not so far from the truth, as were old timers who thought that "Chian" couldn't stage the great annual show without "booze." The celebration just held was the first under prohibition. And it was the most successful of the frontier days. Crowds ranging up to 20,000 daily assured that next year and for many years without liquor the cowboys will hold forth in their annual festival.

Tent colonies of auto tourists, spread out on the plains near Cheyenne, attested to the widespread popularity of broncho busting, roping, steer bulldogging and horse racing. Cowboys from Chicago to Walla Walla and Cody to Fort Worth were entered in the contests.

A Parisian, with a sense of humor, bequeathed 300 francs to each relative who abstained from attending his funeral. Only one poor relative insisted on following the deceased to the grave; and her loyalty was richly rewarded, for by a codicil to his will, the deceased left the residue of his large fortune to those relatives who were prepared to sacrifice the 300 francs.

It is to be hoped our boys are not thinking of bringing home a throne or two as a souvenir of the great war.

American soldiers when they left for Germany were not only all dressed up; they knew where they were going.

There is a great deal of salvage in war, but it doesn't even approach the value it had before it became salvage.

We do not know what can be done about the winter itch unless a way can be found to get it before the peace conference.

What the boys would like especially is to have the government get them home in time for the opening game next spring.

One must hope that their old jobs have been kept for the army of demobilized men who are about to be demobilized.

The registrant who sent back a blank questionnaire missed an opportunity to learn a great deal about himself and his affairs.

Soon we should hear the real truth about how that Belgian paper was published so regularly during all the years of German occupation.

It will be some little time before old conditions are sufficiently approximated to permit reference to a million dollars as a large sum of money.

Malele and Mame are wondering how many of those reconstructed homes in France and Flanders will have the help of a Yankee son-in-law.

The German propaganda is still with us, and it behooves people to examine into harrowing or disturbing reports before putting too much credence in them.

Having avoided trouble with their neighbors during more than four years of war, it is a poor time for the Swiss to begin fighting among themselves.

Food prices, Washington says, went up 10 per cent during the last year. Does Washington imagine that information comes under the head of news to the people?

lage here had picked him up at sea and brought him, as it were, to this big-hearted man's door. He owed his life to MacKnight.

"It's no use, MacKnight," he answered. "I've got to go."

"It'll be that black devil in Singapore!" ejaculated the trader, screwing up his wizened face and pulling viciously at his beard. "You'll no play the fool, Wallen. It's not fit you are to go. Listen to me, mon: it's a matter of twenty miles across the island, as ye know well, and no conveyance, ye mind. And it's no regular trader that's called, for none is due—she'll have put in for water or the like, and will be sailing again at daybreak."

"I can make it by daybreak, MacKnight," Wallen stated quietly.

For a moment MacKnight stared at Wallen, then his hands dropped from Wallen's shoulders.

"Well, go, and be damned to you, then!" he said gruffly, deep down in his throat to hide his emotion—and, turning, stepped abruptly outside.

There were not many preparations to make—very few.

Wallen's worldly possessions were his only through the generosity of the trader. But MacKnight did not stop at that now, for, five minutes later, as Wallen started for the night's tramp across the island, a Malay guide, well loaded with supplies, started with him, while MacKnight cursed with earnest profanity as they wrung each other's hand.

At the edge of the clearing Wallen looked back. On the great bearded figure that leaned against the door frame of the solitary trading station Wallen's eyes lingered.

The man waved his hand and shouted:

"Mon, ye'll no forget MacKnight o' Arru! Ye'll no forget MacKnight, mon!"

And then suddenly a mist dimmed Wallen's eyes. He tried to shout back—and could only wave his own hand in return. And then the trees hid the trader from view.

Forget MacKnight! The man who had nursed him back to life as a mother would nurse her child! Forget that solitary human outpost of civilization—a man with an iron fist, a barbed-wire tongue and a heart as tender as a woman's! No; he would not forget MacKnight!

He forced a smile to his lips. One made strange friendships in these far parts of the world, and made them under strange circumstances. The chances were a thousand to one that he and MacKnight would never meet again—but, for all that, it was a friendship that would last.

Twenty miles across the island before daybreak!

Wallen fell to wondering what sort of a ship and, more pertinent still, what sort of a skipper was on the ship that had put him off. He had refused MacKnight's offer of an advance of money, and he hadn't a penny—but he was satisfied that he would not be refused passage in any case. He could work his way.

A white man who knew his business was worth his weight in gold on a ship any time in these parts. It was true he wasn't any too fit yet; but he was fit enough for that, fit enough—a dull flush came into his face, and his eyes hardened—fit enough to get to Singapore somehow!

He had not forgotten that ghastly afternoon in the reek of the post ship, nor the Chinaman who had died in his arms whispering of Drink-House Sam of Singapore! Forget! He had thought of nothing else all these weeks, raved of it in his delirium, so MacKnight had told him.

There was one thing dominant in his life now—Drink-House Sam of Singapore, the man who had tried so mysteriously to take his life, to stab at him treacherously, without warning, out of the dark.

Singapore! Singapore! It was never out of his mind now. To get there, to force the truth, the motive, the reason, the story behind all this from the human spider that lurked in his web, and then—his fists clenched fiercely—and then settle with the man himself!

And that was why he must get to Pobi before daybreak, before this steamer sailed.

He walked on steadily, without sense of fatigue, his mind abnormally active. And then, with a little shock of surprise, as the Malay made signs to halt and set about kindling a fire, he noticed for the first time that it had grown almost dark.

And also, to his surprise, he noticed that where he had experienced no fatigue before, he was, as he sat down, suddenly grateful for the rest.

He scowled a little over his dipper of tea that the Malay had prepared—and rubbed his leg muscles vigorously. They twitched nervously as he put his weight upon his legs. That was bad! His lips set grimly. Well, bad or not, they'd have to take him across the island before daybreak!

They started on again.

An hour went by, and he was obliged to rest—and after another start and many more after that, to rest again and again with alarming frequency. And, worse still, his progress when he was walking kept growing less and less.

It was black in the tropical forest. He could see nothing, and he stumbled constantly in the vines and creepers that everywhere overgrew the path. He was at last forced to admit that he was not making much more than a mile an hour, and twenty miles at a mile an hour was—he groaned.

The Velvet tin is twice as big as shown here

IF ever men are "Tom" and "Bill" to each other, it's when good pipes are a-going. If ever good pipes go their best, 'tis when Velvet's in the bowl.

For Velvet is a mighty friendly smoke. Kentucky Burley is the leaf that Nature made for pipes. Wholesome and hearty, honest as the day. And Velvet is that same good Burley leaf, brought to mellow middle age.

For eight long seasons Velvet "meditates" in wooden hogsheads, throwing off the rawness of "young" tobacco—truly "ageing in the wood." Out Velvet comes—cool, calm and generous—the tobacco Nature made good, kept good and made better.

Velvet's sweetness is the sweetness of good tobacco, not "put on" like "frosting" on a cake. Its mildness comes from natural ageing, not from having the life baked out. Its fragrance is true tobacco fragrance, not a perfume. And Velvet makes an A Number One cigarette. Roll one.

As good old Velvet Joe says:

"Fill yo' heart with friendly thoughts,
Yo' mouth with friendly smoke—
An' let the old world wag."

BASEBALL RULERS SEEK TO BAN BIG "BAN" JOHNSON

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—If Ban Johnson doesn't make some side or back-steps of definite character within a very short time it is quite likely that he will experience a brand new sensation next winter—that of being relentlessly hunted.

Being hunted in itself spells nothing new for the American league president, but being hunted with the definite purpose of being found and decapitated will be altogether new.

Johnson, in the past, has come some great things for baseball. Largely through his predominating influence, in the early days of the American league, base ball was nurtured and thrived until it became the nation's greatest amusement.

In the last few years, however, Johnson has done a few things that speak unsavory things for him. The latest of these was his crippling of the New York ankles through suspending Carl Mays immediately after that star pitcher had been purchased from the Boston Red Sox.

Last winter there was some effort, misdirected as usual, to force Ban to recede from several points. Clarke Griffith, Harry Frazee and Charles A. Comiskey were said to be trying to force Ban to resign. The trouble blew over quite as quickly as it had started.

Now the New York club, strongest of the lot, is after Ban's scalp, and the bitter enmity borne toward Johnson by raze is on the scales to help Clarke Griffith, wielding the power of the Washington club and Charles A. Comiskey, with his powerful Chicago influence, are expected to jump onto the wagon. These things it can be readily seen, do not portend a peaceful winter for Johnson, inasmuch as it is believed that Detroit and St.

Louis can be swung over to the anti-Johnson side. Owner Navia of Detroit has a bit of grief toward the head of the American league, since on two occasions Hugh Jennings was suspended when victories meant so much to his Tigers.

Johnson was kept quiet for a time by warnings but he has broken out again, and if he really can be forced from the presidency of the league it probably will come to pass during the coming winter months.

When she wrote her famous novel "Comin' Thro' the Eye" forty-four years ago Miss Helen Mathers was only twenty-two. Today it is still one of the best sellers, although the fifty-third edition has been published. But Miss Mathers does not share in the prosperity of the book. When she had written it she was offered a few hundred dollars down by the original publisher, or a share of the profits. She accepted the cash offer, and thus lost about $100,000 which she would have received in royalties.

Jap---U. S. Relations In Most Excellent Shape Declares Ishii

(By United Press.)

TOKYO. (By Mail.)—An entirely optimistic view in regard to the future relations of Japan and the United States was expressed by Viscount Ishii, Japanese Ambassador to the United States, who has just returned to Japan, in an interview the other day. The Viscount said that there is no collision of vital interest between the two countries on any problems, although it is inevitable that now and then propagandists will talk about a Japan-American war, and some people will believe that relations between the two nations are badly strained.

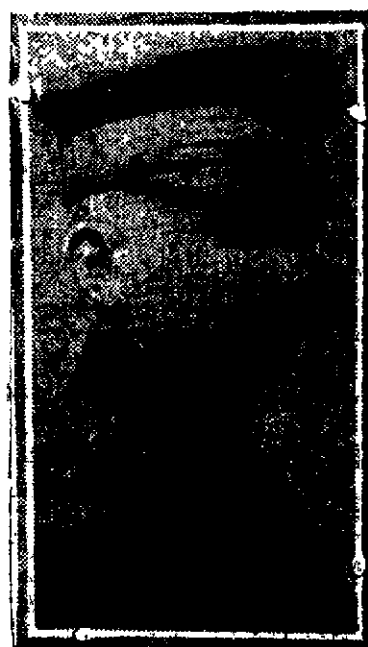

He attributes all misunderstandings between the two Powers to the intrigues of propagandists, some of whom are active in China, he said. America's vital interests are mainly in the European and Latin-American markets and not in the Orient market, the Viscount said. Therefore, America is contented with the strict observance by the powers of the open-door and equal-opportunity principle in China, and has never dreamed of an economic monopolization of the Chinese market nor will she dream of such a thing.

America's safety in the extreme Orient, continued the Viscount, lies in her developing China industrially and commercially hand in hand with Japan as well as with other Powers, but not in trying to monopolize Chinese national resources. Though the Oriental market, especially that in China, may be of vital interest to Japan, Ishii does not believe those interests are being endangered by the American participation in the industrial exploitation of China, because, however wealthy the American capitalists may be, they cannot be considered as aspiring to pour the greater part of their capital into enterprises in that country to such degree that no other country can compete with them.

Since the American Government, as well as the American people in general, are confident that Japan will never destroy the principles of the open door and equal opportunity in China thinking people there fell quite safe and satisfied with the present situation. For the same reason, Ishii approves of the American proposition of the consortium for China. He says it will be very advantageous, not only to China herself but also to Japan and America, for two reasons: First, it will do away with useless economic competition among the Powers interested in Chinese finances and economics, and, secondly, it will serve to put an end to the activities of propagandists.

Referring to the Chinese peace delegates' refusal to sign the Peace Treaty, he said this action was very disadvantageous and that would soon be brought home to China that it is advisable to sign.

AMERICA'S IMMORTALS

MATEJ KOCAK,
 Sergeant, Company C, 5th Regiment, U. S. M. C.

Sergeant Kocak (decensored) won the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in action near Solissons, France, July 18, 1918. When the advance of his battalion was checked by a hidden machine gun nest, Sergeant Kocak went forward alone, unprotected by covering fire from his own men, and worked in between the German positions in the face of fire from enemy covering detachments. Locating the machine gun nest, he rushed it, and, with his bayonet drove off the crew. Shortly after this Sergeant Kocak organized 25 French colonial soldiers, who had become separated from their company and led them in attacking another machine gun nest, which was also put out of action.

Mrs. Mary Gleason, of Watertown, hopes to become the first woman sheriff in the State of New York. At the present time Mrs. Gleason's husband holds the office. His term will expire next year and under the law he is not eligible to re-election. His friends have therefore started a movement for the nomination and election of Mrs. Gleason so that the efficient administration inaugurated by her husband may be continued.

WAR GRENADES AS SAVINGS BANKS

Yanks' Explosive "Eggs" Made Safe For Distribution to Children.

The most unique and interesting of all souvenirs of the great war will soon be ready for distribution among the boys and girls of Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey.

These souvenirs are hand grenades originally intended to be used with deadly effect against the German armies. When the war ended the government had millions of them made up. There being no longer any need for them as war weapons, the War Savings Division of the Treasury Department secured a large supply. The grenades are now being altered into savings banks to hold dimes and pennies.

The alteration simply means removal of the explosives from the grenades and the cutting of openings for deposit and removal of dimes and pennies. No change is made in the appearance or in the springs and triggers by which the grenades are operated.

Hand grenades, or "bombs," were among the most ingenious and most deadly weapons used in the war. The grenade made for the United States Army was an improvement on all the best types of hand "bombs" invented by foreign army men.

When loaded for use the grenade was kept "at safety" by a small pin which locked the firing trigger. The thrower was required to hold the bomb in his throwing hand, pull out the pin with the other hand and then make a throw. As long as the grenade was held in the hand it was safe because the hand kept a strip of metal under pressure which prevented the firing spring from working.

The instant the bomb was thrown this strip of metal was forced off by the firing spring which also operated the trigger. This trigger struck a cap which set fire to a fuse timed to burn for 5 seconds. At the end of that time the spark reached a detonator which exploded and blew up the main charge of T. N. T., shattering the bomb into about 40 pieces. These pieces were the outside shell of the grenade, it being marked out into little squares which became flying bullets because the force of the explosion broke them off at the thin parts of the shell.

The explosion was almost sure death to everyone within ten yards of the spot where the bomb burst. The Yanks called the grenades "eggs." They were "bad eggs" to the Germans.

These wonderful weapons with firing pin and trigger still included but made safe and harmless are now being used to build up instead of to destroy. They are the queerest and most interesting savings banks ever made. To obtain one a boy or girl is required to buy a 1919 Government Savings Stamp, which costs $1.19 during August and $4.20 in September. The stamps and grenades are to be obtained at banks or at offices of the War Savings Division in every town. A Savings Stamp is to be bought when the boy or girl goes for the grenade. The boys and girls also sign a pledge to use all of the money saved in their grenade banks to buy more Government Thrift or Savings Stamps.

That is how the grenade will help to build up. The money put into Savings Stamps is loaned to the Government and will be used to pay off war debts and promote the Government's prosperity plans.

Savings Stamps costing $4.19 or $4.20 in August or September, 1919, will be bought back by the Government in January, 1924, for $5 each. Those who buy them not only save their money, but earn good interest on it. Thrift Stamps start a Savings Stamp bank account and cost only 25 cents each.

Further information about the way the grenades are to be distributed and how soon they will be ready may be obtained at banks and War Savings offices everywhere.

Meat Injurious To The Kidneys

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

The name of a ship counts a lot with a sailor. For a great many sailors won't sail on a ship whose name begins with "S" while the letter "C" is another initial which is disliked. And a female name is preferred to a male name.

BUILT RAILROADS IN WARTIME THEY CAN DO SAME NOW

(By United Press)

PARIS. (By Mail).—Bringing down Boche airplanes and dropping bombs on German railroads are excellent training for construction bosses. At least so says Mr. Henri Bouche, Paris contractor, who advocates the employment of France's air force in aiding the reconstruction projects in Northern France.

According to Mr. Bouche aviators can immensely facilitate the following three phases of the work.

- (1) Obtaining valuation of damages.
- (2) Planning the reconstruction work.
- (3) Supervising actual rebuilding.

Taking a census of the damages will be a work involving innumerable physical obstacles if undertaken only by inspectors on the ground. Bouche points out that aviators, unhampered by the impossibility of the roads and trench-lined fields, can easily reconnoiter the whole front, take pictures when necessary, and in a few hours accomplish what it would take months to do by any other means.

Attacking the reconstruction problem, says Bouche, will be not unlike attacking an opposing army. At first, the reconnaissance must be made, exact knowledge obtained, whether an immense waste tacked. Just as the German batter seek out ruined bridges and shell ridges.

Thus by gathering records of the ruins can assist the evaluation upon which the repairs to be based.

Then when the arm has been determined, be assigned the task reconstructions. Being both a mental and visual of the task, they can plans for rebuilding area.

Finally, the actual work can best be carried out. Just as the aviators report the results of the progress of the work. In this phase, the work carried out extensive lines.

When opals the mine they can be picked out on a map.

MILK MONEY

Care of Milk

Great deal of money this season because nearly every condensing, milk plant, and it necessary "to turn back" a large has so deteriorated that it cannot be used milk, milk powder or cheese.

That every can of milk "turned back" is a waste of every possible means to insure it in good condition. The first essential. This should be much easier in summer it is easier to keep cows and stables arms are compelled to walk through a barnyard in coming to the barn to be over the legs and udder of the cow with a high bacterial content and such a result at once. The stables should be kept a farmer is so busy with the crops that the rush of work is over or until a rainy not only makes it extremely difficult to also attracts many flies which are an addition of clean milk.

Insists has been found in some places to be. The strainers and milk buckets should be disinfected each time they are used. In many milk is marketed are washed at the plant. In some plants it is thoroughly done and by steam. In other cases, however, the gain after they are returned to the farm. from the cheese factory in the same cans to the factory in. Too much attention is given if this practice is followed. The cans are scalded and aired before they are used cooled just as low as possible just as soon as possible. The exact method by which this is done is a problem for each individual. A constant supply of cold running water is a big asset to a milk plant. Many farmers set the cans of milk in a vat of water and find it very satisfactory. Farmers who do not have a large amount of water use an aerator to cool the milk rapidly. A combination of these two methods. Where one has a vat of water and a truck should be put into a vat of ice water. Milk taken to a "four corners" to wait for a truck should be sun. This can be accomplished by covering the vat with a blanket.

It has been said: Produce clean milk. Cool it at a low temperature until it reaches the

UNITED STATES IS RICHEST NATION IN ALL THE WORLD

LONDON (By Mail)—While the brain might reel at the mass of figures unloaded at a meeting of the Royal Statistical society, some interesting details as to the world's wealth can be extracted from a paper written by Professor J. C. Stamp Comparing the pre-war wealth and incomes of England, Germany and the United States, Prof Stamp computes the respective totals at

	Wealth
England	$71,500,000,000
Germany	82,750,000,000
United States	210,000,000,000

	Income
England	11,250,000,000
Germany	10,750,000,000
United States	36,250,000,000

On a per capita basis, also, America comes out easily the richest country in the world. The capital per head of the population, according to Prof Stamp was, before the war.

	Capital	Income
England	$1,590	$250
Germany	1,220	150
United States	2,120	360

All these figures must be considerably inflated to obtain the current year's capital and income, but the increase would certainly be biggest in the case of the United States, which could boast at least treble its pre-war wealth.

The thrifty habits of the French nation were reflected, said Prof Stamp in a capital of $1,515 per head, while Italy and Austria had only $640 and $605 respectively. He computes Japan's capital at $12,000,000,000, or on a per capita basis, $220 capital and $30 income per head of population. The capital and income of Spain was probably as low as any in Europe, the income per head not exceeding $55.

New Zealand has a railway that runs in a perfectly straight line for one hundred and thirty-six miles.

In a certain section of Persia there is a race of pigmy camels five feet in height and snow white in color.

Lobsters are said to have a great dread of thunder, and when peals are very loud will swim to deeper water.

In normal times about one in every fifteen Frenchmen is connected in some way with the wine and liquor trade.

In northern China vegetarianism is almost the rule, the food principally consisting of turnips, potatoes, corn, rice and millet.

SUITS AND COATS

Return to Strictly Straight Line Is Predicted.

Variety of Styles and Contradictions Between Paris and New York Expected to Continue.

Differing from the general opinion abroad is an American authority who is emphatic on the subject of width in suits and coats and makes the statement that a return to the strictly straight line tailored coat is certain. As this comes from one of the houses which are not at all extreme and very well known it carries weight. It is possible, notes a leading fashion correspondent, that the next season will see the same variety of styles and absolute contradictions between Paris and New York that have prevailed for the last twelve months.

Paris, quite as much as China, is a place where they do things by opposites. Having discarded as much clothing from the knee downward as possible, in the warmest of weather they are wearing velvet berets and velvet hats. It is fortunate that there is a vogue for hats of black tulle and Chantilly or the smart Parisians would be doomed to wear nothing but velvet on the warmest of days unless she resorts to the glycerinated paper hat—a late innovation.

The white velvet is, of course, very much smarter than black, if one must wear velvet on a summer day. Lewis put forth some charming models in leghorn and milan, but they proved too commonplace for the Parisian, who refused to wear them.

One of Lewis' best liked models is of white velvet in a rolling brimmed sailor shape with a huge "pout" or marabou in white also. It had the merit of looking summery, at least in color, and does not look as out of place as did some of the velvet tam-o'-shanters, which sound in description a great deal like our own Greenwich village headgear.

PRaise FOR THE BLUE SERGE

Material May Be Made Up Into Coat and Skirt, or Into One-Piece Street Dress.

There is no material which so perfectly displays restraint as a very dark blue serge. The color and the texture in themselves suggest a world of tempting opportunities ignored. Thus there is implied an experience with, and knowledge of, infinite varieties of other hues, other clothes.

According to the need of the wearer, the blue serge may be made up into coat and skirt, or into a one-piece street dress. With an exacting eye for the narrow shoulder, the close-fitting tapering sleeve, and the utmost precision of finish and cut, coupled with a resolute determination not to concede an inch to the skirt hem, one may give free scope to other lines. Once these details are observed, the most fantastic sweeps of the tailor's shears may be allowed.

Blue serge is the most efficacious background for accessories of the toilette and for little finesses. Let it be a starting point for pearl gray or sand-colored spats, for matching mousquetaire suede gloves rolling loosely over the tight wrist, for a dark hat of concentrated lines and for a fur neckpiece of reduced proportions. Then, as a signature to the work of art, as well as an insinuation of what one might have done, let the veil etch a mad design in one bold, detached pattern upon the cheek. This is a dashing touch in a costume otherwise reserved.

Blue serge is unassailable, impeccable. It is clever, and it is wise.

THE HAT AND BAG TO MATCH

A novelty floppy summer hat, lined in rose with a band of that shade. The bag (to match) is sort, with a lining of rose, strings and Chinese beads.

Javelle Water.

This water is fine for removing stains. Take one pound of sal soda and 5 cents' worth of chloride of lime. Put them in an earthen bowl, pour two quarts of soft boiling water over them (rain water is best). Let it settle, then pour off the water and bottle it. It will remove fruit stains and even indelible ink. Soak till stain disappears; then quickly wash in warm water.

The skin of an elephant when tanned is very expensive, the tanning taking about six months.

Mothers Fitting The Boys For School Will Appreciate These Prices

We have placed a great number of Boys' school Suits on Sale for the great day and you'll find here a big saving in the Boy's school outfit.

If we had to buy them on today's market they would cost you a vastly higher price than we have these marked. Come in and see them on Friday.

The Cleverest Showing Of Men's & Young Men's Suits

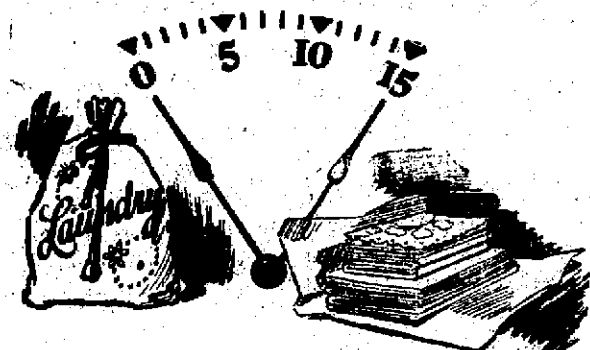

For the men who are young and men who are younger we have some suits here that are worth more than passing notice. They include the season's—and when we say season's, we mean this Fall—classiest numbers. The increased size of this section of the store holds a surprise for you. Come in on Dollar Day.

Why Not Buy Your Winter's Sweater On Dollar Day

You'll be needing a sweater as the chilly days come on. These are way, way under today's market and you'll appreciate the values the minute you see them.

A way to do the Family Washing in 15 Minutes

Wouldn't you esteem it a blessing if you could have the toil and muss of the family washing all over within ten or fifteen minutes?

A dream? Not at all—for it can be done. Here is the recipe.

First ten minutes—Gather up the family washing and make a list of it.

Next four minutes—Wrap securely into a bundle.

Last minute—Telephone our Laundry.

Total time expenditure—Fifteen minutes.

Time saved—Ten to fifteen hours.

When our driver calls, he also gathers up the untidiness and drudgery of washday—and leaves for you, leisure for more womanly activities.

Meanwhile your washing is at our laundry being cleansed with thoroughness and a consummate care that no laundress can excel. There is no boiling or rubbing to fray fabrics and wear out clothes. We achieve cleanliness by gentle sousing and rinsing in clear, soft water and pure white suds. Your clothes are daintily finished, too, and returned to you sweet and spotless.

Reduce your washday to fifteen minutes by sending your family washing to us. A telephone call will bring our driver.

FRIDAY---a day of savings that will set a new record for this store. Judging from preparation we have made, we expect that it will be the biggest day of the month, as well as the biggest of all Dollar Days. Because season-end opportunities and re-adjustment of stocks and prices combine with Dollar Day savings, this event will mean economies unsurpassed for everyone attending, as some lots and lines are limited in quantity, it is advisable that you do not hesitate to come as early as possible Friday.
